

Oriental suicide squad kills 25 at Israel airport

TEL AVIV (UPI)—Three Japanese suicide guerrillas opened fire with automatic rifles and hand grenades into a crowd of 250 to 300 persons Tuesday night in an unprecedented terrorist attack at Lod International Airport. Twenty-five persons were killed, another 59 wounded.

The gunmen pulled their weapons from their luggage and began firing shortly after debarking from an Air France jetliner from Paris and Rome. Terror stricken and screaming, the crowd in the waiting room dropped to the floor or ran for cover.

Among the victims were eleven Puerto Ricans who were members of a delegation of Christian pilgrims beginning a visit to the Holy Land. At Tel Hashomer Hospital, officials said 14 of the 59 wounded were in serious condition. Some had limbs blown off by the grenades. Among the victims was a two-year-old girl.

One of the Japanese committed suicide by one of his own grenades, another was caught single-handedly by Jean Claude Zeitoun, a 26-year-old airport maintenance man, and the third, who troops thought had escaped, was killed in a gunfight and was discovered among the dead taken to the hospitals.

One of the attackers told officials he was a member of "the Army of the Red Star," a leftwing group mobilized by the Arab guerrilla movement. In Beirut, the militant, Marxist-oriented Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine (PFLP) claimed responsibility for the attack.

Asked about the nationality of the attackers, a spokesman for the PFLP said: "They may be Japanese; they may be Vietnamese. All that we are saying now is that they belong to the squad of the martyr Patrick Uguello of the PFLP. We may issue a statement later." But Israeli officials said the attackers' passports indicated they were Japanese and that two had been identified.

Security officials said the dead and captured Japanese were named Nago and Sugizaki but did not give full names or other details.

Israeli Premier Golda Meir interrupted a vacation and sped to the airport, then to the hospital. Tired and haggard, she withheld comment on the incident.

The attack began shortly after 10:30 p.m. (4:30 p.m. EDT). The Japanese were among the 115 persons who debarked from the Air France plane. They rode buses to the passenger terminal and apparently retrieved their weapons from their luggage.

Suddenly the terminal was filled with screaming persons as the attackers sprayed bullets and grenades throughout the room. "There were bullets flying all over," said policewoman Dorit Shriki.

At least five grenades exploded amid long bursts of rifle fire. The persons in the terminal ran for restrooms, the VIP lounge or outside, seeking cover.

The force of the explosions ripped bodies and luggage alike, leaving splashes of blood everywhere. Bullets shattered glass windows and screens throughout the arrival lounge. Holes were splattered in the walls.

President Nixon waves to crowds as he rides in car with Shah of Iran

Praises alliance with Iran

Nixon pledges help to allies

TEHRAN (UPI)—President Nixon declared Tuesday night the United States would not abandon its allies in its search for better relations with China and the Soviet Union.

The President spoke at a glittering white tie dinner given by the Shah of Iran a few hours after he arrived from Kiev, the ancient capital of the Soviet Ukraine where he wound up a history-making summit mission to Russia.

"We have not overlooked a very fundamental fact...that we build our policy on the alliances we have had in the past, have now and will have in the future," Nixon told guests dining under the sparkling crystal chandeliers of the Shah's Niavaran Palace north of Tehran.

In an exchange of toasts, Nixon called the Shah a close friend and ally of America on whom he depended for "valuable advice." The Shah said the President's visits to Peking and Moscow would have a profound effect on world developments.

The arms control agreements with the Russians are "of the utmost importance," the Shah said, and "your visit to China, before anything else, assisted the universal aspect of our present-day world."

In a lengthy discussion at his guest quarters at nearby Saadabad Palace before the dinner, Nixon assured the Shah of the United States' continued moral and military support for Iran as it seeks to ease tensions in the Middle East.

The 52-year-old Shah and Empress Farah Diba, clutching a floppy white hat in the wind, were at heavily guarded Mehrabad Airport when the President and Mrs. Nixon landed aboard their "Spirit of 76" jetliner after a 3 1/2-hour flight from Kiev in the Soviet Ukraine.

In Kiev, last stop in Nixon's eight-day Soviet visit, White House adviser Henry A. Kissinger said: "I think we essentially met the goals we set for ourselves, give or take 10 per cent."

The 22-hour Tehran stopover, including two Nixon conferences with the Shah, was seen essentially as a "show the flag" visit intended to underscore American interest in preserving the stability of the Persian Gulf area, strategically situated between the explosive Arab-Israeli rivalries to the west and the troubled South Asian subcontinent to the east.

En route to Tehran, Kissinger told reporters that Nixon's talks with the Shah would center around oil policies and the Soviet Union's new pact with neighboring Iraq. He said he did not expect extended discussion of U.S. military aid to Iran, which continued without interruption to the tune of $6.6 million last year.

Perhaps because of the Shah's concern over a recent upsurge in leftist urban guerrilla incidents in Iran, hundreds of uniformed policemen and armed plainclothes agents with walkie-talkies roamed Mehrabad Airport before Nixon's arrival. Parking was banned on streets leading 15 miles into the city, and helicopters clattered overhead.

Hijacker kills himself

SAO PAULO — A lone gunman who hijacked a Varig airliner with 87 persons on board Tuesday committed suicide as federal troops rushed the grounded plane, ending a seven-hour hijack-extortion attempt, police sources said. The air pirate, whose identity was not immediately disclosed, killed himself after he received a $254,000 ransom from the airline and allowed 84 of the passengers and crewmembers to disembark safely.

Candidates rule out Wallace

LOS ANGELES — George S. McGovern and Hubert H. Humphrey, the leading candidates for the Democratic presidential nomination, Tuesday ruled out Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace as a running mate. But McGovern and Humphrey both said that Wallace, paralyzed from the waist down by a would-be assassin's bullet, should be consulted and his positions heard in party councils. The candidates made the statements in the second of their nationally televised debates.

U.S. ready for conference

BONN — Secretary of State William Rogers told the ministers of the 15-nation Atlantic Alliance Tuesday the U.S. is willing to hold preliminary talks on a European security conference in Helsinki this November. The ministers responded favorably—and if the preliminary talks succeed in finding common ground for a full scale security conference—that conference could be held next year, said Rogers.

Bremer slapped on 24 counts

UPPER MERLBO — Arthur H. Bremer, already facing federal charges in connection with the May 15 shooting of Gov. George Wallace, was arraigned Tuesday on 24 state counts stemming from the assassination attempt. The 23-year-old was returned to Baltimore County jail after the 15 minute hearing.

General Dynamics grounded

WASHINGTON — A federal grand jury charged General Dynamics Corp. Tuesday with conspiring to defraud the government by charging the Air Force some $300,000 for defective parts on the F111 jet fighter-bomber. Four present and former company officials were also named in a two-count indictment returned in a U.S. District Court in Dallas.

Shoe industry laced

WASHINGTON — The times that try men's soles: The Price Commission told shoe manufacturers Tuesday they can raise price only to reflect increases in materials and labor costs. Taken in response to sharply rising shoe price, it was the first time the commission hasn't allowed companies to add an extra amount to their prices strictly for profit.

Drivers licenses to get new look

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Pennsylvania drivers licenses will include complete descriptions of the motorist including height, weight, hair and eye color and race starting next year.

The Bureau of Motor Vehicles and the State Police, in a joint announcement, said Tuesday the new drivers licenses will be "virtually impossible to alter or counterfeit."

William Titelman, director of the bureau, said the new licenses will be printed using special steel engraving plates, paper and inks similar to those used by the U.S. Treasury Department for printing currency.

Currently, Pennsylvania licenses are printed with paper and ink that is easily available.

In addition to a description of the motorist, each license will have a special security control number.

Pennsylvania's new licenses, however, will not have the drivers picture on them as in several other states.

Titelman said the bureau's study of other states found that licenses with pictures are also subject to counterfeiting.

"In Michigan a photographer had a mock-up of a license where the motorist stuck his head through a cut out hole," he said.

Titelman said another reason why the state shied away from the photograph on the license was the initial $12 to $15 million needed to set up the operation.

Senate votes to control welfare rules, regulations

HARRISBURG (UPI) — The state Senate approved a bill Tuesday to give the legislature control of all welfare rules and regulations.

The measure passed 31-15 and was sent to the House. A separate bill which has identical wording already passed the House two weeks ago. Both chambers must pass the same one before it can go to Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

In the House, preliminary approval was given to a measure to speed up state payments to about 200 school districts including Pittsburgh and Philadelphia.

The Senate vote came after Majority Leader Thomas Lamb, D-Allegheny, read a letter warning that the bill could endanger Pennsylvania's chances for receiving about $600 million in federal funds.

According to federal law, one state agency must be designated to deal with the federal government. The letter said the new measure would "impair the Welfare Department's ability to function as a single state agency."

Shapp said he would veto the proposal if it reached its desk.

The Department of Public Welfare estimated that its current rules and regulations amount to a stack of paper four and one-half feet high weighing 44 pounds.

According to the legislation, each member of the General Assembly would examine all the rules and propose changes in any rule which he disliked.

All future rules would have to receive legislative approval before becoming effective, a process which could take about three months under the complicated plan.

The House approved by a 98-5 vote an amendment to a school aid bill giving Philadelphia and Pittsburgh extra money.

Cripples enemy supply system

U.S. bombers hit railroad complex

SAIGON (UPI)—Fighter-bombers from the aircraft carrier Coral Sea pounded North Vietnam's biggest railroad marshalling yards for the first time in 3 1/2 years, leaving the complex in flames and dealing a major blow to the Communist supply system, the U.S. command said Tuesday.

The command said the Monday raid against the Uong Bi yards 10 miles north of Haiphong severely damaged a roundhouse and left other buildings ablaze.

The complex handles virtually all cargo shipments from Haiphong, the country's major port, to Hanoi. From there, the materiel is shipped south to supply the two-month-old Communist offensive.

South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu, showing his confidence in the ability of government troops to stem the North Vietnamese drive, flew to two major battlefronts and spent the night at Hue, the former imperial capital believed to be a major Communist target.

Thieu promoted his commander at the Central Highlands city of Kontum, personally pinning the general's star on Col. Ly Tong Ba, chief of the 23rd Infantry Division.

Communist shells thudded into the city less than one-half mile away during the brief ceremony but Thieu ignored the attack.

Kontum has been under assault for five days and heavy fighting was still going on in some parts of the city. Thieu said the current attack was broken but warned defenders the city must be held "at all costs" if the Communists make another assault.

American B52s dropped about 1,500 pounds of high explosive around the city for the second straight day in an attempt to break up Communist forces.

The Saigon command said government soldiers killed 176 Communists in Kontum Monday.

The chief U.S. adviser in the area, John Paul Vann, said "the situation couldn't look better" for government troops.

From Kontum, Thieu flew to Hue in his American-supplied T39 executive jetliner where he visited a number of command posts and promoted Ranger Col. Bui The Lan to brigadier general.

Patriotism question sewed-up

BOSTON (UPI) — It's no crime to wear a U.S. flag sewed to the seat of your pants, a federal judge ruled Tuesday.

U.S. District Judge Levin Campbell said there was such widespread use of the flag on cars, bumpers, jackets, sweaters, coats and elsewhere that it could not be considered a crime to wear it on pants.

Campbell ordered the release of Valerie Goguen, 22, of Leominster, Mass., who was arrested in 1970 for having a flag sewn to the seat of his pants.

Played in bomb shelter

Children die in explosion

VALDESE, N.C. (UPI)—An explosion ripped apart a backyard bomb shelter in this western North Carolina hamlet Tuesday night, killing five children and injuring another.

Authorities, operating on the assumption that a gas leak caused the blast that hurled bodies 50 feet away from the scene, sealed off the area to traffic.

First reports indicated that at least 10 children were playing inside the bomb shelter belonging to Ed Garrou, a hosiery firm executive.

But Mrs. Florence Garrou, his sister-in-law, said she believed the children were playing in the back yard of the house near the shelter.

She said the shelter was built by Ed Garrou "during the Korean (sic) scare" about 60 feet behind the house. "It's an authentic thing," she said. "It's been checked periodically and under control and usable since."

The dead children were identified as 12-year-old Anita Garrou, daughter of the owner; Donald Robinson, 13, his sister Regina, 10, Glorinda Hammond, 12, and Mike Powell, 10. Bea Picou, 10, cousin of the Garrou child, was reported in satisfactory condition at Valdesse General Hospital.

Duke of Windsor's exile ends with burial at home

LONDON (UPI)—The long exile of the Duke of Windsor from the land he once ruled as King Edward VIII ends today when his body is returned to his homeland for burial in the royal family's cemetery.

A Royal Air Force VC10, piloted by Queen Elizabeth's favorite pilot, Squadron Leader Dennis Lower, flew to Paris Tuesday to pick up the coffin of the duke, who died there only a week before the 35th anniversary Saturday of his marriage to Wallis Simpson of Baltimore, Md.

With his abdication in 1936 to marry the American divorcee, the duke became a self-imposed exile because of the refusal of the crown to give his wife royal status. He made brief visits many times but never came back to England to stay.

The RAF plane will bring the duke's coffin, accompanied by a high-ranking military group under Air Vice-Marshal Sir Harry Burton, to the RAF base at Benson, 50 miles west of London.

The plane is scheduled to arrive about 11 a.m. (6 a.m. EDT) today.

The Duchess of Windsor originally had planned to accompany the body of her husband, but the strain and shock of his prolonged illness led her physician to order her to rest at the home in Paris a little longer. She is now expected to arrive on a royal plane Friday.

The Duke and Duchess of Kent will meet the duke's plane in place of the royal family. On the field 250 dignitaries and military officers and men will be drawn up.

The coffin will be taken to the Church of the Ascension on the base for a brief service. Then the body will be taken late today or Thursday morning by road the 18 miles to St. George's chapel on the grounds of Windsor Castle.

The chapel was closed

Duke of Windsor

Tuesday after morning services to prepare it for the lying-in-state.

The duke's coffin, draped with his personal standard, will be set on a catafalque. Officers of the Foot Guards in ceremonial dress will stand vigil. The guards were chosen because the duke served with a guards unit in World War I. The Household Cavalry, traditionally represented when royalty lies in state, will not take part.

The lying-in-state will be the only public part of the funeral services. The funeral will be held Monday with only some 200 members of the family and close friends present. Queen Elizabeth and all others of royal blood will support the bereaved duchess, who will stay at Buckingham Palace as a guest for the first time.

Burial will be in the garden of Frogmore House, most private of the royal residences about half a mile from Windsor Castle. Its grounds hold the mausoleum of Queen Victoria and her consort, Prince Albert.

Queen Elizabeth was in mourning and decreed court mourning until sundown of the day of the funeral.

Inmates end rebellion

PATERSON, N.J. (UPI)—Six inmates charged with murder and armed robbery seized the warden, a nurse and five guards as hostages Monday during a three-hour rebellion at overcrowded Passaic County Prison. Two of the guards were stabbed with crudely fashioned jailhouse knives.

The captives were released after the inmates met with a minister and received promises from prison officials of no reprisals. Jail authorities also said they would consider the inmates' demands, including one that prisoners be released on Sundays to attend outside church services.

The two guards who suffered stab wounds were described as in good condition at St. Joseph's Hospital. Two other guards suffered minor injuries but were not hospitalized. Warden Jack DeYoung, and the nurse were not hurt.

A county warrant officer said three of the inmates were murder suspects and the other three were being held for armed robbery.

County Sheriff Frank Davenport said order was restored to the jail shortly before noon. The six inmates later were moved to a separate area of the jail after discarding their "shivs," or jail-made knives.

Prison officials said the uprising began when three inmates being taken to an elevator for arraignment at a court a few blocks away overpowered three guards.

Police discount race hatred as cause for 11 shootings

RALEIGH, N. C. (UPI)—Police discounted the possibility Tuesday that blind anger against whites might have led a troubled black janitor to shoot down 11 whites, three fatally, at a shopping center here Monday.

"He shot at a colored man and missed him," said Police Chief Robert Goodwin. "The janitor in Ronsoms (a dress shop) was cleaning the windows and a shot broke the window beside his head."

Goodwin said that despite an intense investigation through the night into the case of Harvey Glenn McLeod, 22, "it looks as though there's nothing in his background to give us any real clues."

The police chief said officers were trying to obtain reports from Duke University on a check doctors made of McLeod in 1962 when he had "blackouts," but so far had not been able to obtain a release from McLeod's family.

Seven victims of McLeod's deadly accurate rifle fire at North Hills Shopping Mall remained hospitalized Tuesday, one in critical condition, three in serious condition, the rest listed as "good." The bodies of three victims, and that of McLeod, who turned his new rifle on himself as sirens sounded, were at funeral homes.

Authorizes new duties

House revives Subversive Board

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The House voted 228 to 105 Tuesday to change the name of the controversial Subversive Activities Control Board and to authorize the President to give it new duties to keep it alive.

The agency would be called the Federal Internal Security Board under the legislation approved and sent to the Senate, where Sen. Sam J.

Ervin, D-N.C., has vowed to kill it.

The board, was informed in 1950 to identify individuals and private organizations it regarded as Communist, but its powers have gradually been limited over the years by adverse Supreme Court rulings.

Also, the attorneys general who must initiate action before the board can make its findings have largely ignored the agency, and congressional liberals have repeatedly demanded that it be abolished.

The closest the House ever came to killing off the board was in July, 1971, when a 246-141 vote defeated a liberal effort to cut off SACB financing. There are five members on the board, each making $36,000 a year and the organization's last annual budget totaled $450,000.

The House-approved measure approved Tuesday would leave unchanged its old duties and in addition would give authority to President Nixon's July 2 executive order for SACB hearings aimed at determining whether present or prospective federal employees knowingly belong to an organization found to be subversive. This membership would be grounds for refusal to hire or a dismissal.

The House rejected by voice vote a substitute bill by Rep.

Richardson Preyer, D-N.C., that would have abolished the SACB and set up a new commission to administer a federal employee security program, which would include screening of potential or current federal workers for their membership in subversive groups.

Ervin, chairman of the Senate constitutional rights subcommittee, has criticized the SACB in the past for having nothing to do, and "if it did have something to do and did it, it would be unconstitutional."

Ervin warned in advance that if the House passed the latest SACB bill, he would lead a Senate effort to defeat it.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., leader of the SACB's liberal critics in the House, said the bill would totally abdicate any responsibility Congress has in the field of internal security (and) return to the dark days of guilt by association."

Draft lottery numbers chosen

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Selective Service will draft men with lottery numbers up to 50 to meet a call for 7,200 draftees during July, it was announced Tuesday.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said no more than 50,000 men will be drafted this year — about half the 98,000 drafted last year and the lowest figure since before the Korean War.

No men were drafted at all in the first three months of the year while 15,000 with lottery numbers 1 to 35 were called up in the April-May-June quarter. With 7,200 being called in July and an expected 9,000 in August, an average of no more than 4,700 in the last four months of the year can be called under Laird's ceiling.

Men with low lottery numbers who lose their deferments on graduation from college usually flood Selective Service so that it does not have to call up ever higher numbers after the summer. For example, last year the highest number was reached in June and in 1970 it was reached in August.

But because of a new regulation expected to go into effect at the end of June, officials may have to go through many more numbers to get their 50,000 servicemen.

That regulation would allow men to join the National Guard or Reserves after they received their induction notices telling them to report to the Army after 30 days.

High Court rejects appeal to reinstate death sentence

WASHINGTON (UPI)—A unanimous Supreme Court left untouched Tuesday the action of the California Supreme Court abolishing the state's death penalty and sparing the lives of 103 condemned persons.

In a brief order without comment, the court rejected an appeal from the state tribunal's decision brought by California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger. On Feb. 18, the California court ruled 6 to 1 that the death penalty violated the state's constitutional prohibition against "cruel or unusual punishment."

The U.S. Supreme Court has under consideration a group of separate cases seeking to strike down the death penalty throughout the nation on grounds it violates the federal constitutional edict against "cruel and unusual punishment."

These cases — to be decided before the Court ends its term in about five weeks — were not affected by Tuesday's action. It meant only that the justices declined to review the California ruling and gave no indication of how they felt about the constitutional issue.

There were 98 men and 5 women on California's death row awaiting the gas chamber when the state supreme court abolished capital punishment. As matters now stand, they will escape execution and serve prison sentences instead.

Younger, in his appeal to the Supreme Court, argued that because the state tribunal stepped into an area where "elected representatives and executive officers (are) empowered to act," the people of California were denied their right to "a republican form of government."

He also contended that the California court had in effect made a ruling involving the federal constitution and intruded on an area reserved to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Younger had urged the high court to stay the California ruling to prevent the immediate modification of the death sentences to life imprisonment. He further said the ruling

Shultz confirmation hits snag

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Senate confirmation of George P. Shultz as new Treasury secretary got snarled Tuesday in a still pending controversy over Richard G. Kleindienst's nomination as attorney general.

Senate Republicans asked that the Senate delay acting on Shultz's nomination until it disposed of Kleindienst's appointment.

"We don't want the Shultz nomination to be used as an excuse for any delaying tactics (on Kleindienst)," GOP Leader Hugh Scott told reporters.

Kleindienst's nomination has been held up by a dispute over the role he and other Justice Department officials played in a decision last year to drop antitrust suits against International Telephone & Tele-

might compel the release of "dangerous criminals" now being held without bail on murder charges.

The state ruling involved the appeal of Robert Page Anderson, who had been convicted of murder, attempted murder and first degree robbery. His case was backed by the NAACP Legal Defense Fund and the American Civil Liberties Union.

The Court also: — Ruled 6 to 3 that Texas and other states have the right to reduce payments to welfare families with dependent children by a greater percentage than for the aged, blind and disabled. In Texas, eight of nine recipients of the children welfare funds are black or Mexican-American. More than half the aged, blind and disabled are white. Similar standards are used in 17 other states and the District of Columbia.

— Upheld a New York state loyalty oath for teachers which had been challenged on religious grounds by a Quaker teacher in Syracuse.

— Refused to interfere with a lower court decision that a group of neighborhood residents were denied a rightful voice in planning Philadelphia's Model Cities program. The ruling by the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is expected to be cited in other cities by ghetto groups seeking more influence in the federally financed programs.

— Agreed to decide next term whether a grand jury can compel a possible defendant to supply a recording of his voice or a sample of his handwriting for comparison purposes.

County officials nix moth spray

EASTON — The state Department of Environmental Resources will not do battle with the gypsy moth in the Wind Gap-Pen Argyl area.

The environmental Hearing Board had given its approval for the spray program in that area, but Northampton County Commissioners halted any chance of spraying by refusing to spend money on the state-required certified letters to residents informing them of the spray area.

Chief Clerk Richard Heil said the county will not assume the additional cost and drain on county personnel who would be required to prepare the letters.

Heil added the county would have approved the spray program if it would not have required additional work or financial obligation by the county.

Heil pointed out the letters would have had to be prepared under a crash program because the spraying should be done within the next two weeks if it would be effective.

Commission Chairman Martin Bechtel said the cost of the additional certified letters was the main consideration in the county officials' refusal to send the information through the mail.

Bechtel said he felt there was no reason for sending certified letters because only a few people registered complaints about the spraying the first time the letters went out.

DER personnel have held fast to the stand that the second group of letters is necessary if spraying is to be conducted and that the cost of the letters is to be borne by the county.

John G. Hope, director of public information for DER, said there will be no spraying unless the county sends out notification.

The board last week released the opinion that the chemical Dylox could be used in the Blue Mountain area of the county, but only with certain stipulations.

The stipulations included that the spray area should be limited to exclude the headwaters of the Bushkill Creek, that people should be kept out of the area during the actual spraying, and that the additional notice should be given to property owners in the area to be sprayed.

The spraying of Dylox had been postponed earlier last month after a hearing was granted to examine the assets and liabilities of spraying. The hearing was held at the request of the Environmental Protection Society, of Bethlehem.

The Bethlehem organization was opposed to the use of Dylox, which was called hazardous and ineffectual by the organization's spokesmen.

Farm employes covered

STROUDSBURG — Agricultural employment must provide Workman's Compensation coverage for their employes under provision of a bill signed into law in recent months.

Previously, agricultural employes were free to decide whether or not they would carry Workman's Compensation coverage.

The new law covers all agricultural employes with an annual payroll of $150 or more, who hire workers for 20 or more days. Under the new law, which is now in effect, the only employes for which coverage is not required are domestic household workers.

Workman's Compensation insurance provides payment to employes involved in work related accidents to offset loss of income and medical costs. The insurance also provides death and disability payments.

By providing Workman's Compensation insurance, employes are protected from lawsuits that could result in heavy damages if an employe is injured.

The insurance can be purchased from an insurance company or from the state's Workman's Compensation Fund. Premium rates are uniform regardless of the carrier.

P.A. teacher receives grant

PEN ARGYL — Patrick Corey, physics teacher at Pen Argyl Area High School, has been awarded a National Science Foundation grant for eight weeks of study at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y.

The purpose of the program is to make the study of physics more interesting and understandable through the "humanistic approach," a new curriculum designed by Harvard University.

Corey plans to use this type of program at Pen Argyl High School within the next year or two.

He is a 1968 graduate of East Stroudsburg State College, where he majored in physics and mathematics.

He is the president-elect of the Pen Argyl Area Education Assn., and he has been a member of the Pen Argyl High School faculty since 1968.

Phone testing underway

BANGOR — Harold Ross, Bangor Area manager for Commonwealth Telephone Co., has announced that installation crews began testing the new equipment which was recently installed at the telephone company offices.

The testing got underway Tuesday. Installation crews began systematic calling of selected numbers from the list of changed numbers which will become effective Sunday, June 18.

Persons whose telephone numbers will be changed have already been notified by mail of the pending change. The new numbers will be used after midnight, June 18.

Ross said the installation crews will call the numbers and verify with the called party that the telephone operation and transmission are satisfactory.

The placing of these test calls will insure that when the new equipment is cut-over at midnight, June 18, everything will be operating satisfactorily.

This new telephone equipment currently being tested is part of the second of the three-phase $1,128,000 conversion of the Bangor central office by Commonwealth Telephone.

West End Fair receives state aid totaling $13,696

GILBERT — The West End Fair Assn. has received a state grant of $13,696 as its share of the Fair Fund administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture.

The Fair Fund's total disbursement for the current year came to a record breaking $1,605,483, with the largest distribution — $1,315,312 — going to a total of 101 state and county fair associations and other agricultural organizations conducting similar expositions.

The Monroe County FFA Assn. received $611, and the county 4-H Development Fund received a total of $2,000.

In Northampton County, the Blue Valley Farm Show received $7,977; Plainfield Farmers Fair received $5,361; FFA Assn. received $1,999, and the 4-H Development Fund received $2,000.

In Pike County, the Delaware Valley Fair & Farm

Show received $2,232, and the 4-H Development Fund received $1,666.

The Carbon County Fair received a grant of $26,383, and that county's 4-H Development Fund was given $2,000.

The estimated attendance was 6,099,629 at the 1971 fairs throughout the Commonwealth. The attendance figure indicates a drop of less than two per cent when compared to the previous year, with much of the loss attributed to one less fair participating in the fund.

Secretary of Agriculture Jim Mellale said the Fair Fund is financed from a portion of the Commonwealth's share of racing income at licensed pari-mutual harness tracks.

Youth oriented agricultural activities are the principal beneficiaries of the Fair Fund with $249,118 divided among 50 county FFA associations and 67 county 4-H Development Funds.

Additionally, the premiums paid to the young farm people in competition at the state and county fairs is also partially reimbursed by the Fair Fund.

Eight state-wide agricultural organizations received a total of $41,052 to help underwrite competitive and educational activities conducted by them.

State's egg crop increasing

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania, the fifth leading egg producer in the nation, appears to be taking dead aim at moving up in the standings.

According to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service, laying flocks in the state turned out 324,000,000 eggs during the month of March — or six per cent more than the preceding month and seven per cent more than a year earlier.

That national total, a staggering 6,287,000,000 eggs, is just one per cent more than a year earlier.

Although prices received by Pennsylvania egg producers did average two cents per dozen more in March compared to February, they were down three cents a dozen from March of 1971.

The Commonwealth's laying flock on April 1, 1972, was estimated at 15,918,000.

Quitting TIRAC not the answer

It is difficult to fathom the reasons behind the Pike County Commissioners' apparent intention to drop out of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council.

To be sure, there has been much talk about TIRAC's reason for being having been subverted. From the task of studying the impact of the proposed Tocks Island Dam and Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area and advising the seven member counties on what measures to take to cope with that impact, so the stories go, TIRAC instead has become a lobbying organization for the Tocks Dam.

Thomas Klock, executive director-secretary of the advisory board, has denied that his organization has been lobbying for Tocks. But even if it were true, then it would seem the best position for Pike County — and any of the other counties contemplating a similar move — would be on the board, where action can be taken to redirect TIRAC on its mandated course.

Bailing out at this critical juncture could only have the undesirable effect of leaving Pike County out of touch with developments on the Tocks scene. Like Tocks or not, membership on TIRAC has the advantage of placing a governmental entity in the position of being able to plan for whatever changes the project will bring to the government's area of responsibility (or with the consequences of an aborted project.)

There could be an even more deleterious effect: Pike County's action could very well snowball, leading to membership on the advisory board falling below minimum required and a total disbandment of TIRAC. Which would mean, whether or not the dam is ever built, that the counties involved in the recreation area (which by itself will pull millions of visitors into the region) without the means to plan cooperatively for the onslaught.

In another way, the Pike County position is self-defeating. All right, so TIRAC is a lobbying organization. What could be more effective, then, than to maintain membership and work within the organization to help it lobby against the Tocks Dam, if that is what the membership's majority wants.

The place for Pike County is within TIRAC, not out of it. If there is dissatisfaction with its present leadership, then change it. If there is disaffection with its alleged partisanship, then block it. But it is incumbent upon its members to make TIRAC work, not take the easy way out and quit. There is too much to be gained by keeping TIRAC a viable force for planning for the future.

License increase

Pennsylvania had $1,166,634 paid hunting license holders in fiscal 1971, which is 225,000 more than the second state, Michigan.

From hunters it took in $8,587,000 last year, according to figures supplied by the Department of the Interior. This is about a million and a half more in dollars, than the second state money-wise, which is not Michigan but Colorado.

Licenses must cost a pretty penny in the Rocky Mountain state because they had only 300,000 holders last year.

Pennsylvania's Game Commission needs more money to operate as it has in the past. If it doesn't have more income, it will have to cut back in many ways, including game propagation. This should not happen because hunting is big business in Pennsylvania and creates many jobs in selling equipment and supplies.

To get more income last year, Pennsylvania sharply increased its fee for out-of-state licenses. This move proved to be the wrong thing, because income revenue from out of state showed a drop instead of increasing.

So in-state licenses are in line for a boost. A fifty-cent increase would create an additional $500,000 of income.

Will Pennsylvania hunters accept this 50-cent added cost of a license? We think they will, because Pennsylvania hunting is the best anywhere and hunters want to keep it that way.

Who had problems?

It was good to limp. This was an achievement. I shot the month of May in the hospital and this was checkout day. Kelly said she would pack the pajamas and the toiletries. No, I said, I would do it. She could not appreciate the thrill of being able to walk to the bathroom.

Mrs. Smith, my 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. warden, stuck her attractive young face into the room. "I'll get a wheelchair," she said. I shook my head. "I'll walk," I said. She set her lips. "It's a hospital rule." Okay, I said. It's a rule.

A man cannot win sympathy for a disc operation because it isn't deadly. You go to the operating room with pre-op shots and you wouldn't care if they sawed the spine in half. I was floating six inches off the table when Dr. Harry Fisher and his assistant, both in billowy green, jostled with me until the big sunlamps overhead were covered with clouds and their voices faded in a long echo chamber.

A snap for doc

For Fisher, the operation presented no problem. He's been doing it most of his life. Now, on the 20th day, I was going home. I am a time-conscious man and I could not forgive myself for losing all those days and hours and minutes in a jumble of hard pain and disjointed memories.

I was packing and Pete came in. He was in a wheelchair. He is a man of compassionate brown eyes and black hair, a self-effacing man. "Hello," I said, as he sat in his wheelchair watching. "When did you get in?" "Yesterday," he said. "They told me you were across the hall."

"Checkup?" I said. He nodded. "Checkup." Well, I said, everybody hits pain spots but I tell you, Pete, this has got to be the world's standing broad jump champion for acute agony. "I heard about it," he said, shaking his head. "They told me you screamed at night."

I stopped packing. "Funny," I said. "I don't remember that." He said maybe they were exaggerating. My wife said that the nurses came into room 812 one night and found both arms and legs twined in the side bars. I was four inches off the mattress hollering.

Maybe. But there is a grace in every evil. "Pete," I said, "for the first time in my life I understand the decibels of spasm. I have a new appreciation of being able to stand on two feet. You're lucky that you only have to undergo a checkup."

The packing was finished. "Did you check me out with the cashier's office?" I said. Kelly said yes. "Everything is taken care of." "You drive," I said. She smiled. "The doctors say your recovery is a little too rapid. You may get some pain when you get home."

I grinned at Pete. "Just let me get home with my own kids, my own wife, and Charlie Chan, and I'll shake hands with any pain that shows up." I laughed. "Nick Bersan the pro was up here and he says that the operation may cure my slice."

Pete is the kind of man who finds anybody's happiness contagious. "Take it easy," he said. "Don't try lifting pianos for a while." Oh, I thought, you lucky, lucky man. He lit a cigarette and turned his wheelchair to face the sunshine coming in the window. I envy the men who can check in for tests and check out. It's a status symbol.

What would he know about pain? Real pain. He could roll up and down the corridors, visiting patients and nurses, swapping gossip, taking afternoon naps, being waited on and bathed. That's the rich life. I began to see Pete for what he was — a nice guy full of self-pity.

I was dressed and ready to go. "Get well soon," I said. "Sure, sure," he said. "I'll be all right." A big black orderly came in with a chair. He could have lifted me and that chair and carried us into the next county without drawing a deep breath.

Not worth mentioning

Pete and I shook hands. "What kind of tests you in for?" I said. "Ah," Pete said, grinning. "It's not worth talking about." "Tell me." He shrugged. "Dr. Steve Morris had this chest X-ray taken — it's an annual thing, you know — and he found a nodule on a lung."

I stopped. "A what?" "It's smaller than a golf ball but we don't know what it is. If it turns out to be what we think it is, the thing is in an inoperable place. We can't stop it. Just slow it down."

Suddenly I shook. The hands grabbed the arms of the wheelchair. Perspiration started on the neck. The orderly wheeled me down the hall. "Well," he said cheerfully, "what was your trouble, mister?"

"Nothing," I said. "Really nothing."

New heart surgery

I am a victim of anginal chest pain. I must often resort to a variety of pills when the pain strikes me.

I'm afraid that the condition will get worse and the pills will not be effective. Is there anything else I can do for this condition?

Mr. B. R. K. K. Pa.

Dear Mr. K.: Angina pectoris, which you describe, is an oppressive almost choking feeling associated with pain. It may spread over the chest, and down the left arm.

"Angina" is the pain suffered when the blood supply to the heart through the coronary blood vessels is inadequate. After special exertion or severe emotional stress the demand made on the heart is greater than normal. When the heart is called on to do more work it is over-taxed and cries out in pain, begging for rest.

One of the newest and most remarkable advances in modern medicine is a type of surgery known as the "by-pass" operation. Many doctors are enthusiastic about it for some patients.

After careful study of the total structure of the heart, and after evaluating advantages and disadvantages, this operation is performed to replenish or increase the blood supply to the heart.

Many coronary heart patients who are totally dependent on drugs, and many who are almost inviolated by their condition, have once again been returned to better health.

The decision to use this operation depends on the combined judgment of your doctor and the heart surgeon.

How does a doctor treat a burn of the hand or the face if the patient comes directly to his office?

Could the same treatment be done at home?

Mrs. P.C., Calif.

Dear Mrs. C.:

Recently a patient came to my office suffering from a rather severe and painful burn of the face. Her face had been spattered with hot grease from a fry pan.

I applied towels soaked in ice water for about half an hour. This reduced the pain and the swelling considerably. I then suggested the use of an antibiotic ointment to prevent infection.

The use of ice packs and ice water for ordinary burns is generally accepted to be very effective.

Doctors who work in large industrial plants treat a burn of the hand in almost the same way. The hand is placed in a basin of ice water containing special anti-bacterial solutions. Then the skin is carefully dried by patting, an anti-bacterial ointment is applied, and the burn is covered with clean gauze.

The treatment I have described, of course, applies to burns that are not too severe.

Zoning problem

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

Richard Graeber of Henryville R.D. 1 is a patient man — up to a point. When he goes beyond that point his jocular veins swell and his face and neck is red with rage. Right now he's red with rage. And we can't blame him.

Graeber, who is involved in several small business enterprises in Pocono Township to carve out an adequate living for he and his family, is caught in a vise that is pressing him out of another business. And the supervisors are holding the vise.

Graeber is trying to construct five cottages on his property and, according to the township zoning ordinance, has to pay $100 for a hearing before the zoning board of adjustment for a variance. He's assured of obtaining the variance, but right now he's stubborn enough not to go through the red tape — and the $100 — to construct the cottages.

He's standing on a principle. And again, we can't blame him.

In 1970, before the township's zoning ordinance was adopted into law, Graeber presented a plan to the township planning commission for constructing five cottages. He didn't have to present the plan, but he did as a matter of courtesy. The plans are still in the planning commission's office.

Graeber constructed two of the cottages before the zoning ordinance went into effect. Now, he wants to construct the others. But he can't. Not without paying the $100 first for a zoning variance hearing before the zoning board of adjustment. The zoning officer could give Graeber a non-conforming use certificate — for $10 — but according to the zoning law this will only allow Graeber to build one more cottage. He wants to build three. For that he must get the variance and that will cost him $100.

Graeber's argument is that he is being forced to go through the variance procedure with the high cost while another large business was able to construct additional dwellings without having to go through the costly procedure.

The other business is Pocono Haven. Contracts for the construction of 15 homes in Pocono Haven were prepared before the zoning ordinance went into effect. The ordinance was passed and the homes had still not been constructed. Only the contracts were final. According to the ordinance, Pocono Haven would have had to go through the same procedure as Graeber — the zoning board of adjustment. But this didn't happen.

The supervisors ruled that Pocono Haven would not have to go through the zoning board of adjustment and building permits were issued directly. The supervisors took the action on their interpretation that a construction contract was just as good as having started construction.

Since then, the supervisors expanded this interpretation to mean that if any foundation has been laid before the ordinance went into effect, the individual would not have to go through the zoning board of adjustment for a variance.

Graeber takes issue with the Pocono Haven ruling. He argues that while Pocono Haven had signed construction contracts, he had plans submitted to the township notifying officials of his intentions.

This is where the argument lies.

We take Graeber's side of the argument and agree with him that township officials for two years were aware of his plans to construct the five cottages, that he completed two and intended to complete the others. Since the ruling with Pocono Haven, we don't see why Graeber, a small businessman, should have to spend $100 for a hearing before the zoning board of adjustment.

The supervisors have made the interpretation and set a bad precedent. We argue that Graeber's submitted plan is just as binding as Pocono Haven's contract.

If the supervisors are afraid of a proverbial Pandora's box in this matter, then we ask them to reverse their entire interpretation and enforce the law equally for everyone — the Graebers and Pocono Havens — but not for just one and not the other.

Merry-go-round

Big dealings at summit

WASHINGTON — Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev, holding out a promise of progress at their Moscow meeting, related an anecdote to President Nixon on the eve of his departure.

The anecdote was part of the private message that Soviet ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin delivered to the President at Camp David.

Brezhnev had a favorite story, said Dobrynin, about the traveler who asked a grizzled, old Russian farmer how long it would take to walk to the next village. The farmer grunted that he didn't know. With a shrug, the traveler started off toward the village. But as he was striding away, the farmer called after him: "Fifteen minutes."

Surprised, the traveler retorted: "But you said you didn't know how long it would take me to reach the village."

"That was before I saw how big your steps are," said the old man.

Dobrynin, quoting Brezhnev, said the Communist party chief was satisfied from the advance steps that substantial agreements would be reached in Moscow to improve Russian-American relations. Brezhnev's message was that their meeting would not be merely "cosmetic" — a word that the President later repeated to the press to express his optimism about the Moscow outcome.

His optimism was based, however, on more than Brezhnev's encouraging message. The President also had on his desk an intelligence analysis suggesting that Brezhnev's personal prestige was on the line, that he needed to produce favorable results to justify the summit meeting.

Inside the Kremlin, apparently, Brezhnev had encountered harsh opposition to inviting Nixon to Moscow. The military-industrial faction, in particular, felt the summit meeting would undermine their relations with Hanoi just as the North Vietnamese were achieving victories with Soviet equipment.

The Russian marshals were anxious to share in the North Vietnamese victories and to gain an edge over the Chinese in Hanoi. They also wanted to exploit North Vietnamese displeasure over President Nixon's visit to Peking. This would be difficult to do, it was argued, if Nixon were also invited to Moscow.

The opposition to the invitation was so strong that Brezhnev had to invoke his personal authority to override the marshals. When the President mined Haiphong harbor, it strengthened the opposition and caused a crisis for Brezhnev. He had to exercise all his powers to keep the summit conference from being cancelled.

The intelligence analysis suggested, therefore, that he needs a successful meeting with Nixon to justify his insistence on going ahead with it.

Chinese art of acupuncture used in New York hospital

NEW YORK (UPI)—The centuries old Chinese art of acupuncture has been used in a New York hospital to anesthetize a patient in what is believed to be the first successful such needle therapy during surgery in the United States.

A spokesman for the Albert Einstein College of Medicine Hospital disclosed Tuesday that the legs of a patient, identified only as a 65-year-old bank employee, were anesthetized with thin needles while a surgeon grafted skin from his thigh to the bottom of his foot. No other anesthesia was used in the operation, considered relatively minor, which took place last Friday.

Dr. Frank Z. Warren, president of the Coordinating Committee for Acupuncture Research, a New York-based group of physicians interested in the Chinese therapy, said it was "the first successful operation in the United States exclusively under acupuncture anesthesia."

Warren commended the hospital medical board for its "open-minded decision" to "permit further study of this controversial subject."

Throughout the one-hour operation the patient was described as alert and feeling no pain. A spokesman for the acupuncture committee said such surgery normally would be extremely painful.

The surgery was conducted by a team headed by Warren. He was assisted by Dr. Pang L. Man, director of Research at Northville State Hospital in Northville, Mich.; and Dr. Yoshiaki Omura, director of Medical Research of the Heart Research Foundation of New York, under the supervision of Dr. Louis R. Orkin, professor and chairman of the Department of Anesthesiology at Albert Einstein.

Acupuncture, also known as "needling," is a procedure in which delicate needles are inserted into the body at a point corresponding to the "meridian," or lines of the body related to the patient's complaint.

On each side of the body are 365 acupuncture points, many of them located at the juncture between a nerve and a muscle, and the acupuncturist must determine which point is related to the meridian in question.

Considered not only a pain killer in China but also a medical panacea, it gained considerable attention in the United States following President Nixon's visit to China.

Neither Western nor Chinese doctors have been able to offer a precise explanation of why or how acupuncture works.

Wallace fights infection effects

SILVER SPRING, Md. (UPI)—Gov. George C. Wallace continued Tuesday to fight the effects of infection around one of his bullet wounds amid indications he would not be moved from Holy Cross Hospital any time soon.

Partially paralyzed from one of his wounds, Wallace, 52, was reported in the latest medical bulletin to be experiencing normal temperature, blood pressure and pulse.

"He had a full night's sleep and enjoyed a breakfast of scrambled eggs and toast," the bulletin said. But it added "there continues to be some purulent draining from the incision."

This referred to an incision made last week in the Alabama governor's abdomen to remove an accumulation of pus around an infected wound.

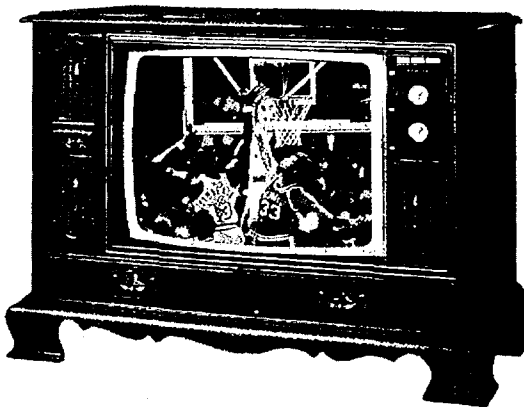

Wallace's accused assailant, Arthur H. Bremer, was arraigned Tuesday at Upper Marlboro, Md., on 24 counts of Maryland law violations in connection with the shooting in a shopping center at Laurel May 15.

The former busboy from Milwaukee, taken to the hearing under heavy guard from the Baltimore County jail, was charged with attempted murder, assault, and violating the state's gun control laws. Asked if he understood the charges against him, Bremer, 23, replied, "Yes."

In addition to the Maryland charges, Bremer faces a federal charge of attacking a candidate for a national office.

Billy Joe Camp, Wallace's campaign press secretary, told reporters, "I don't think there

State to decide tax case

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court Tuesday upheld a ruling against a New Jersey group fighting payment of Pennsylvania's income tax.

The high court ruled only on where the suit should be heard and not on the tax itself.

The court upheld a ruling by a three-judge federal panel in Camden, N.J., last year. At that time, the lower court refused to hear the suit challenging the tax, deciding the matter was best left to state courts.

Platform hearings begin

BOSTON (UPI)—The Democratic Platform Committee began a series of nationwide hearings Tuesday and the party's two top presidential candidates caught a verbal broadside from the first speaker.

Mayor Kevin H. White, leading off the two-day session which is the first of 12, criticized Sens. George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota for overlooking the nation's cities Sunday night in the first of their televised debates.

Other speakers during the gathering at Boston's historic Faneuil Hall addressed themselves to problems of virtually every segment of society, from the blacks and the poor to women's rights and the elderly.

White, who backed the presidential campaign of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie before the Maine Democrat withdrew from the presidential primaries, said the McGovern-Humphrey confrontation "left me startled, disappointed and angry."

Beulah Sanders of New York City, national chairwoman of the National Welfare Rights Organization, urged defeat of the Family Assistance Plan pending before Congress.

Hopes to be psychiatrist

Medical school enrolls blind student

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—David W. Hartman is going to medical school. David W. Hartman is also blind.

The 23-year-old Gettysburg College graduate last week was admitted to Temple University School of Medicine after being rejected by six major universities.

School officials believe it is the first time a blind person has been accepted to medical school in the last one hundred years.

Hartman said he was told, "It's impossible for you to become a doctor. You're blind."

"I don't know what kept me going," he added, "except that I believe that somehow I can do it."

Hartman said he has dreamed of going into medicine since he was in high school. He feels psychiatry would be a natural field because "you've got to understand the handicapped before there is any hope for psychological impact."

"In psychiatry, I'll be doing most of the work myself," he explained, "but a trained nurse could help me in picking up the visual symptoms."

Hartman said he doesn't plan to limit himself to working solely with the blind. In addition, he wants to "study all handicaps and work with them. I want to know about their interaction with other people and with their families."

The Phi Beta Kappa in biology said he leveled with Temple officials and explained his medical education would "take a great deal of time and that I would need help."

He said he has already gotten much help from Gettysburg professors who helped him adapt to difficult anatomy and other pre-med courses.

"We dealt mainly with the shark and cats in pre-med studies," he said. "I used my hands to identify the organs and the students helped me."

"I think the anatomy in medical school will be easier. There will be certain parts of the body I can't reach, but I will be able to tell where they are from reference to other organs."

He admitted "clinical work is going to be a little harder. I haven't yet faced that in college. I believe I can do it with help from the other students."

Born with poor eyesight, Hartman became totally blind at eight years of age after a series of unsuccessful operations.

He begins his medical studies at Temple in September.

No voice in planning

Court denies rights appeal

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Supreme Court Tuesday let stand a ruling that a group of North Philadelphia residents have been denied their rightful voice in planning that city's Model Cities program.

The Third U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling handed down last Feb. 25 is now final. By not affirming the appellate court but merely rejecting an appeal, the high court made the ruling binding only in the Third Circuit's jurisdiction—Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware.

The Supreme Court ruling is certain to be cited by inner city residents elsewhere filing similar lawsuits.

The suit brought by the North City Area-Wide Council, Inc., was the first of its kind under the 1966 Model Cities Act. The council, composed of 458 persons from 145 organizations, sought to prevent city authorities from moving ahead with Model Cities projects.

The circuit court ruled that both the city and Nixon Administration violated the act by accepting a proposal which had been drawn up without the necessary citizen participation.

Citizens groups held equal planning power with cities during the first two years of the Model Cities program, but ultimate power was turned over to the mayors under new guidelines drawn up in April, 1969.

The Philadelphia citizens group had contracted with the city to help plan programs to rehabilitate blighted sections in the city's largest black ghetto. The council would have had control over some of the non-profit corporations created to implement various health, housing and education projects under a plan submitted to the Department of Housing and Urban Development in 1968.

HUD disapproved this on grounds it created conflict of interest but accepted a new proposal under which the city arranged to deal with a smaller group called the Citizens Advisory Council.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Never venturing more than three miles from home over the holidays. I feel as if I'd had a vicarious part in a wide variety of holidays from the serried ranks of campers lined up at the information center to the frantic flow of traffic on Route 80, viewed comfortably from the bridges overhead.

From the elaborate buffet of the Shawnee Women's Golf Assn. brunch with shirred eggs, cheese blintzes, chicken livers, chicken in baked squash, and picture pretty strawberries, to the backyard barbecue with hot dogs.

with his very first fish from the Delaware to the Glenbrook Scotch Foursomes where a lot of women found themselves shooting from woods they'd never been in and a lot of men had to figure distances they'd never been away from the green before.

From the familiar trappings of a small town parade to the unfamiliar roar of four military jets flying in formation above my treetops. From other people's new grandchildren to reports of unusual weddings.

And the nicest part of the whole holiday was not having to leave after it was over.

Shawnee CC women open season

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — Blue vases filled with red and white carnations, fern and baby's breath formed the table decorations for the opening "brunch" of the Shawnee Women's Golf Assn. on Saturday at the country club and also were favors for those attending.

Mrs. Charles Obermeyer, president, presided at the brief meeting, introducing her officers and chairmen who presented the summer's schedule, beginning with the first regular tournament held Tuesday.

The elaborate brunch was an innovation for opening day with many members taking to the golf course immediately afterward. Fred Waring, who had arrived home the day before, brought greetings, as did the golfing staff. Mrs. Karl Dresdner was in charge of the brunch.

Is the barbecue an ingenious invention of the American woman to get her husband to do the cooking? Or did he think it up to avoid taking the family out to dinner? Either way, everybody loves a cookout!

Even the dieter. The backyard barbecue can be a wasteful saver . . . if you avoid the fatty steaks and bottled barbecue concoctions. Did you know that some brush-and-baste barbecue mixtures can be 25 calories a tablespoon or more . . . that's 400 calories a cupful! That's because most are well laced with sugar and oil, neither of which is really necessary to do the job. The tenderizing effect is provided by the tomato, lemon juice, vinegar, wine, pineapple or whatever other acid liquid makes up the marinade . . . which also adds to the flavor!

Extra-lean meats like flank steak or beef round will be flavorful and fork tender if marinated several hours (overnight if possible) in a well-seasoned barbecue base. Poultry or seafood should enjoy several hours basking in baste to get well-slathered with seasoning.

Sugarless Barbecue Sauce (3 calories per tablespoon)
1 cup tomato puree
1 cup water
4 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon celery salt sugar substitute to equal 3 tablespoons

Combine all ingredients except sweetener. Simmer, covered, 10 minutes. Stir in sweetener.

unsweetened applesauce
2 teaspoons garlic salt
sugar substitute to equal 3 tablespoons (optional)
Combine all ingredients and pour over meat. Great on lean, fresh ham steak (well trimmed of fringe fat before broiling.) Also good with lamb and chicken.

Japanese Barbecue Sauce (10 calories per tablespoon)
5 tablespoons soy sauce
½ cup sake (or sherry wine)
½ cup water
1 teaspoon freshly grated ginger
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 teaspoon cornstarch
Combine thoroughly, bring to a boil. Pour warm marinade over meat or poultry for a Teriyaki-style barbecue. Brush meat with additional marinade while broiling.

Polynesian Pineapple Baste (5 calories per tablespoon)
1 cup unsweetened crushed pineapple (including juice)

1 cup chicken broth or bouillon (reconstituted or fresh)
3 tablespoons vinegar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon dried onion flakes
1 tablespoon brown sugar
1 finely-minced garlic clove
Bring all ingredients to a boil and simmer for 10 minutes, uncovered. Good marinade for poultry and seafood.

The secret of good play is the ability to read how the unseen cards are divided. Once you know the location of the missing cards, your task is far easier to accomplish.

If you are a defender, your knowledge of declarer's hand will come first and foremost from the bidding. He is bound to have described his hand to at least some extent, and any added information you require will ordinarily come from either your partner's plays or from declarer's choice of plays.

Playhouse sets partial schedule

MOUNTAINHOME — Rowena Stevens, producer and manager of the Pocono Playhouse here, has announced a partial schedule of plays for the upcoming season.

The playhouse's 26th season will open on June 26 with a modern version of Franz Lehar's musical, "The Merry Widow." The show's action takes place in Paris during the 1900's with one of the high points a scene at Maxims where the merry widow waltz is danced and a zesty "can-can" performed.

The Rowena Stevens Company will be at the Playhouse for two weeks, Monday, June 26 through Saturday, July 8, before leaving the Poconos for an extended tour of other major summer theaters.

The week of July 10 will bring to the Pocono Playhouse a mystery entitled "Dial M..." starring Joan Fontaine who first appeared when she played to full houses in Agatha Christie's thriller, "The Unexpected Guest."

Miss Fontaine subsequently returned two summers later to star in another Christie who-dun-it, "The Spider's Web."

Another star in the playhouse's line-up is George Gobel who will appear in "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers" from July 17 until July 22.

Following this, the playhouse will present the musical hit "Hello Dolly" for two weeks beginning Monday evening, July 24 and closing Saturday, August 5.

On Broadway, "Hello Dolly" chalked up 2,844 performances to become one of the longest running musicals in theater history.

Shirley Booth will be starring in "Mourning in a Funny Hat" to be presented the week of August 14.

Although plans have not yet been finalized for the season's remaining performances, the playhouse's summer season will continue into mid-September.

Information concerning tickets, performances, times and season passes can be obtained by writing the Pocono Playhouse, Mountainhome, Pa., 18342.

U.S. Army changes enlistment standards

EASTON — Thousands of Army veterans who want to return to duty with the Regular Army can now do so with a change of enlistment rules just announced by the Department of the Army.

Local Army recruiters have further details on the revised standards including those which apply to former officers and warrant officers.

With its strength decreasing as a result of small commitments in Vietnam, the Army had been forced to restrict enlistment of some former soldiers who did not meet grade and skill vacancies. The few openings which did exist were held for those who had training in highly critical career fields.

Now the Army will return to standards similar to those which had been in effect before July, 1969. The change is effective on March 1 and will apply to several categories of former servicemen.

In the first category are former members of the Army who had six or less years of service and who had been discharged in pay grades E-4 to E-6. These individuals may return to the Regular Army in their former pay grades if they reenlist within three years of their date of separation and if the Army has a vacancy for someone of their combination of skill and pay grade.

The second category of prior service people includes those who were discharged as sergeants first class, master sergeants, sergeants major and all other individuals who served over six years. These people may not return before they have been separated from service over three months. The same vacancy requirements apply to this category.

The third category concerns those who were discharged in pay grades E-4 to E-9 for whom no vacancies exist in their former skills and pay grades. These individuals will be given the opportunity to enlist in pay grade E-3. In consideration of the strict standards applied to former members of the Army, individuals who have served in other branches of the armed services are also subject to the same rule. The also can reenlist only in pay grade E-3.

Record wins top prizes

HARRISBURG — The Pocono Record was designated as one of the best small daily newspapers in Pennsylvania when it was awarded two first prizes by the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Assn. and Pennsylvania Society of Newspaper Editors.

During a recent awards banquet in Harrisburg, The Record received two first prizes in the 1972 Keystone Press Awards.

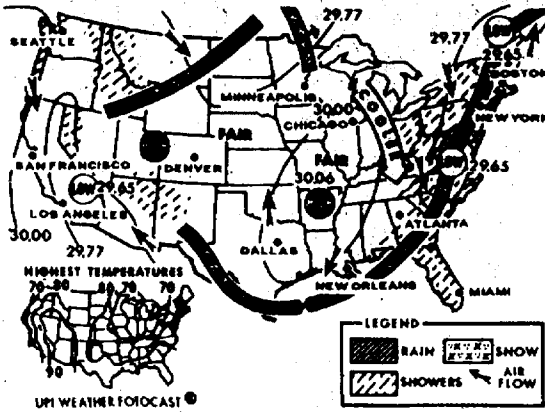

Reporter Conrad Grove won first prize in the sports column category and The Record won first prize for front page design and headlines.

Accepting the award for front page design and headlines was Ron Bouchard, Record managing editor. The Record was judged in Division III, which comprises daily newspapers with under 15,000 circulation. The contest drew 2,383 entries.

Grove, who started with The Record in November 1970 as a reporter, wrote his prize winning story in July, 1971, on the rodeo at the Pocono Horse Center, Mount Pocono.

In past years, the newspapers and its editorial staff has received numerous first prizes for its government and community affairs news-writing in addition to its photographs.

E.S. High School students win aid to study German

EAST STROUDSBURG — Two East Stroudsburg High School students have been awarded scholarships to continue their study of German away from home this summer.

Receiving the scholarships were Clair Tallada, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clair Tallada, Sr., of East Stroudsburg, and Miss Jacqueline Budicker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Budicker, of East Stroudsburg R.D. 3.

Tallada will be traveling to Berlin in a program operated by the National Carl Schurz Assn., which promotes German-American relations and the study of German in the United States.

He will spend four weeks with a family in Berlin-Spandau. During his stay, he will attend a Berlin high school in the mornings. He has also been awarded a study grant from the Pädagogischer Austauschdienst (Education Exchange Service), a German foundation.

Miss Budicker has been accepted as a student at the Southeastern Language Center on the Campus of University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.

She will spend six weeks in intensive study of the German language, literature and culture, with a special course in German media. Participation in the institute will enable the East Stroudsburg junior to complete advance placement college level work before she graduates.

Improving service

County given $3,300 grant for adult probation service

STROUDSBURG — Richard W. Lindsey, chairman of the Pennsylvania Board of Probation and Parole, has announced a financial subsidy from the board to Monroe County for the improvement of adult probation services.

William G. Boor, board member of the Pennsylvania Board of Probation and Parole, recently presented a $3,300 check at the Monroe County Courthouse in the chambers of President Judge Arlington W. Williams of the 43rd Judicial District (Monroe and Pike Counties).

Monroe County entered the program this year, and the current allocation is for one probation officer position.

The chairman noted that 41 counties throughout the state are participating in this year's $338,000 program. The statewide program is responsible for adding 160 adult probation officers, increased use of pre-sentence investigations, and greater use of probation in sentencing of offenders.

It was revealed that high caseloads have reached critical proportions in some counties. Although professional recommendations for caseloads state that caseloads should not exceed 35 per officer, present statistics show that some county caseloads continue to be in excess of 100 per officer.

"Increased public protection by better supervision through reduced caseloads is a top priority in our Agency," said Lindsey.

He further stated, "A community-based probation service has not only proved to be an effective correctional treatment tool of the Courts, but also economically sound, since the cost of maintaining an offender on probation is one-tenth the cost of imprisonment."

"The Pennsylvania Board of Probation and Parole is fully committed to the expansion and professionalization of adult probation services by providing Grant-in-Aid, supervision, and pre-sentence investigation services."

It was stressed that probationers and parolees are productive citizens and, in addition, contribute to the economy by supporting themselves and their dependents rather than being supported by the taxpayer.

Governor Shapp, who favors the improvement of local services, has expressed gratitude to the members of the General Assembly and the state Senators and legislators from those counties which supported the appropriations for this grant.

State police add service

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania State Police Commissioner Rocco P. Urella has announced the PSP has established a "human services referral information" system, something which is not normally considered "police duty."

Col. Urella said, "the state police is the only state agency which maintains perpetually open facilities (24 hours per day, seven days a week) in every area of the Commonwealth. Therefore, we are in a unique position to offer initial guidance to people requiring various kinds of human services which are available through public and private agencies."

Every state police barracks in the state has been furnished with a Human Services Directory. These directories will allow the policeman on duty to direct any person who has a particular need to the proper agency.

Each directory contains the name, address, phone number, and other various items of information as to services provided by both public and private agencies. These include health, welfare and housing agencies as well as services offered by organizations as the Lions, Rotary, Kiwanis, and others.

"We have found," said Urella, "that many people who have need of the various human services simply do not know who to contact. This information is now available at all state police installations."

The Stroudsburg barracks and the Troop S barracks at Mount Pocono have the Human Services Directories covering the Monroe County area. Other state police outposts have directories covering their particular geographic locations.

Marron, the only representative of a TIRAC member county with a record of total meeting attendance, believes the council currently plays a more significant planning role in the region than ever before.

"The counties need each other more now as they grow up

TIRAC receives support from New Jersey planner

By ANDREA B. STERN
Pocono Record Reporter
STROUDSBURG — One of the original architects of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council (TIRAC) does not agree with Pike County's contention that the regional planning organization and its director, Thomas Klock, have adopted pro-Tocks Island positions.

"It isn't true and the records will prove that," Jules W. Marron, Sussex County planning director, said Tuesday. "If this has been interpreted differently, it shouldn't have. I always stand by the record and I haven't heard this to be a fact in any of the hearings I've gone to in Washington or anywhere else."

Pike County, one of TIRAC's seven members, notified the agency's officials last week that it intends to formally pull out of the council at TIRAC's June 10 meeting because Klock has become a proponent of the proposed Tocks Island Dam.

Referring to the impact of Pike's impending withdrawal, Marron maintained, "We went along before. I don't say that casually because we wouldn't like to see them go. My strong feeling is that we will all need each other regardless of what happens to the dam just because of the influx from the cities to this regional area."

Significant role

Marron, the only representative of a TIRAC member county with a record of total meeting attendance, believes the council currently plays a more significant planning role in the region than ever before.

"The counties need each other more now as they grow up than ever before to develop this region," he claimed. "Because so many of them have the same problems, by working together as a council of governments, they have a stronger voice."

"It's just a stronger family but each of the county's home rule is just the same. We do our homework but the problems are regional problems and no longer are we an island by ourselves this way."

Marron further contended a regional planning group has the advantage of easier access to federal funding grants over local government units.

"I happen to be a member of the Lake Hopatcong Planning Board which has been in existence for eight years," he said in support of the regional approach. "Now we're going to put in a whole sewer system for that area. We've had some problems but it's worked out very well."

Regardless of the outcome of the dam — whose fate now awaits a clean bill of health from the powerful Council on Environmental Quality — Marron contended the region will need TIRAC to help solve its problems.

"Even if the dam and the park do not come now, these things (regional growth) will happen just the same. Why here in Sussex we faced some 60 odd subdivisions up for approval in just one month. So people are on the move and out of Suburbia too — not just from the big cities alone."

Crowd control tips netted at Indy 500

STROUDSBURG — It was the 320,000 drivers outside Indianapolis Motor Speedway Saturday who caught the interest of Monroe County Sheriff Forrest B. Sebring who was there to view security and traffic regulations surrounding the Indianapolis 500.

Sebring made the trip to see the race and pick up information on crowd control which may be applied to events at the Pocono International Raceway.

Weeks of preparation went into traffic control prior to the race. Sebring said six helicopters and 500 policemen, including narcotics and canine squads, ranged the speedway during the day-long event.

"Every man had a manual to study before he took his post and he knew what he was responsible for," Sebring said.

Two jail buses were rolled right to the track. They were capable of holding about 50 inmates apiece.

Sebring said between 275 and 300 persons were detained by security police at the race for crimes spanning from drunk and disorderly to felonies. (600 barrels of beer were sold at this year's race.)

Traffic control

Traffic was handled by re-routing all traffic one way to the track and one way from the track, Sebring said. The flow of traffic may have been easier, but travelers leaving the track may have had to travel 10 miles to get to their hotel only two miles from the raceway, Sebring stated.

The Schaefer 500, run for the first time last summer at Pocono International Raceway, drew about 75,000 and the sheriff estimates 125,000 will be on hand July 2 for the second running.

More men and better communications were the lessons Sebring brought back from Indianapolis. He said problems at Pocono International Raceway can not compare with those faced at Indianapolis.

No local arrests

For example, not one arrest was made last year, according to the sheriff. He said security at Pocono International was handled by local and state police—without helicopters.

Sebring said a publicity campaign was waged by local law enforcement officials prior to the Indianapolis 500 in order to discourage crimes.

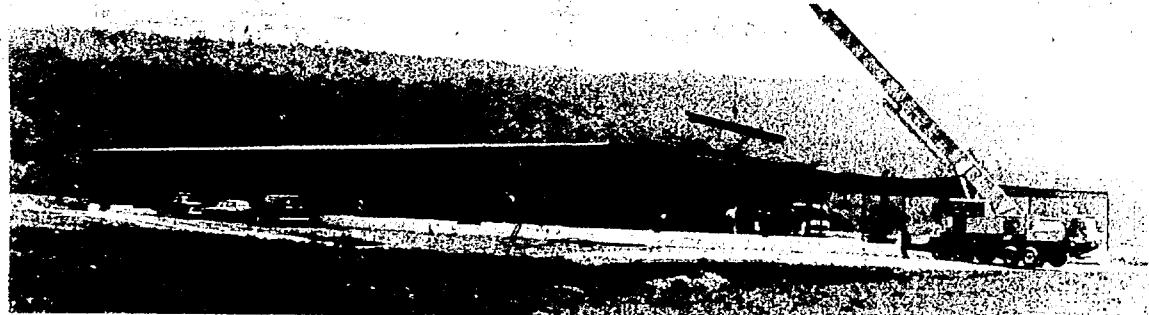

The sheriff said he did not know what might be expected from the crowd at Pocono International Raceway this summer. The infield will be open at 5 p.m. the night before the race. Sebring thinks this will require extra security, but will reduce traffic problems.

To beef up his men Sebring will deputize all local off-duty policemen the day of the race. Still, by his estimates, Sebring is looking for about 100 men from state and local police departments to patrol the Pocono race this year.

Landfill may be borrowed

STROUDSBURG — One more possible solution to Monroe County's solid waste disposal problem may soon be tossed on the pile of alternatives being considered for recommendation by the county's Solid Waste Advisory Committee.

Coming from the Monroe County Refuse Haulers Association, the proposal involves the use of a landfill site in Northampton County.

According to Hermann Vollmer of the haulers association, the solution would still allow for the use of landfill to dispose of Monroe County's solid waste.

The possibility of a total landfill solution in Monroe County was abandoned by the Monroe County Commissioners earlier this year when opposition was expressed by townships being considered for a county landfill site.

Landfill had been considered as the cheapest solution to the waste disposal problem, and other means of disposal — incineration and recycling — require the use of landfills for material which can not be processed.

The independent haulers have been talking with Robert Perin, of Pen Argyl R.D. 1, about the possibility of setting up a transfer station and hauling sanitary landfill to Perin's property.

Precedent possible

An agreement by the two counties, the haulers and the Plainfield Township landfill operator would be a first under state Department of Environmental Resources codes.

The hitch in the proposal at present involves questions the Northampton County Commissioners and the Joint Planning Commission of Lehigh-Northampton Counties want answered.

The authorities want to know the impact of such a hauling agreement on their projected 20-year cycle under a solid waste management program.

Perin is currently employing an engineer to find the answers. He said Tuesday the 15-acre landfill he now operates, and which is in the present management program, is only part of the property he could put to use for landfilling waste.

As a private operator, Perin said he does not actually need the permission of the Northampton County officials to enter into an agreement with the Monroe County haulers, but he will await their approval because "it will be nice to have."

Advantages offered

The haulers said their solution has advantages of being cheaper than incineration or recycling, capable of disposing of all non-toxic wastes — not limited by machine capabilities — and longer hours for disposal.

By using the Northampton landfill, the haulers believe the huge capital expenditure of building an incinerator or recycler can be circumvented. Bulk waste can be placed in landfill and dumping hours are not limited to plant hours, according to the haulers, who say Perin's landfill is a 24-hour operation.

For their part, the haulers will construct and operate a transfer station in Monroe County to compact waste before it is hauled to the Northampton landfill.

Vollmer said the haulers are figuring on a low profit. He said the haulers would want a 10-year franchise from the county to protect their investment in the transfer station.

Vollmer added price controls would be part of the agreement.

The proposal is presently in skeleton form. Vollmer said he would not submit the proposal to the Solid Waste Advisory Committee until assurances were received on the landfill and some exact prices could be worked out.

He said he will wait until he can say what his proposal means in terms of cost to individuals per year before he brought it before the solid waste advisors.

The Solid Waste Advisory Committee is now in its final stage of recommending a solution to the Monroe County Commissioners. Alternative solutions studied over the past 18 months have been farmed to committees within the advisory group and reports are expected on the feasibility of the various alternatives.

Vollmer and the refuse haulers plan to make their proposal in time for final consideration by the commissioners. Preliminary indications are the commissioners will be receptive to the haulers' proposal.

Reward of $1,000 offered in New Jersey church fire

MILLBROOK, N.J. — A group of concerned citizens in the Millbrook-Blairtown (N.J.) area are offering a $1,000 reward for any information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons involved in "the senseless fire destroying the Millbrook Church."

Anyone with information is urged to contact the New Jersey State Police at Blairtown, phone 201-362-6128.

State police believe the fires were the work of arsonists.

The Methodist church, completed in 1860, was devoured by flames Sunday night. The country store next to it was also consumed.

The church was resurrected from disrepair in the 1930s. The store, last operated in 1919, contained a post office.

The store had been restored for "Millbrook Days" last summer and contained numerous items and antiques donated by area residents.

The village of Millbrook was once used as a stop-over place by 17th century copper miners. It is located in Pahaquarry Township along the Old Mine Road and is being restored as part of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area.

The last regular services at the church were held in 1929, although reunion services were held periodically.

Pending the completion of New Jersey's study and satisfactory answers to CEQ's reservations — among them pollution from agricultural wastes along the upper Delaware River which could endanger the reservoir's water quality — the Corps is proceeding with real estate acquisition and demolition, according to the spokesman.

They have already acquired the land at the site of the proposed dam, and, with all of the Tocks hardship cases currently in the appraisal process, they are now concentrating on filling in areas, particularly in Walpack Township in New Jersey.

Out of a total of 72,000 acres to be acquired for the federal project, acquisition for 30,106 has already been completed.

Area's graduates leaning away from private schools

By CONRAD GROVE
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — About the same percentage of high school graduates in Monroe County will enter higher education institutions this year, as compared to 1971, according to reports from school officials.

While most will enter four-year colleges, the trend appears to be leaning toward state-owned or state-related institutions.

Increasing tuition costs at private colleges and universities were cited for the switch.

At Stroudsburg, about 55 per cent of this year's 228 graduates plan on more formal education. That figure has held steady for the past three years, according to Raymond Serfass, guidance counselor.

Of last year's graduates, Serfass said, 44 per cent went to four-year colleges, with the remainder picking junior colleges or two year schools specializing in trades, nursing, business and the like.

Although figures aren't yet available, Serfass pointed to a lesser number of graduates entering the armed services, attributing this to "the attitude of youth toward the draft."

Those not seeking higher education aren't finding the area's unemployment picture too gloomy, he added.

Mechanic jobs
In fact, Serfass said several positions exist in apprenticeships for auto mechanics. And while these have been pointed out, there have been no takers to date. "All seem to have been placed already," he said.

Pocono Mountain has some 40 per cent of its 176 graduates enrolled in post-secondary education. Last year, the figure was 47 per cent, rising from about 40 the year before.

Of those 65 graduates, more than half have picked state-owned colleges or state-related schools like Pitt, Penn State and Temple. Five picked colleges or universities outside Pennsylvania.

Nearly a dozen seniors have picked vocational-education schools at Pocono Mountain, while private junior colleges managed to draw five.

About 42 per cent of Pleasant Valley's senior class will attend colleges, with about 10 picking two-year schools. Like Pocono Mountain and Stroudsburg, the figure has remained fairly stable over the past three years.

It is, however, a marked increase over five years ago, when 25 per cent of the graduates picked higher education, said Principal John Nye.

Nye said nearly all the students not going to colleges have been placed in jobs. Secretarial students have encountered no employment problems.

East Stroudsburg High School has no figures compiled to date, although guidance counselor James Werkheiser noted transcript work has been heavier this year.

Heads Grand Jury's list

New Jail recommended

STROUDSBURG — Construction of a new, modern jail in Monroe County once again was high on the list of recommendations submitted by the Monroe County Grand Jury following their inspection of county buildings Tuesday.

The Monroe County Jail is a favorite target of state justice department inspectors and Grand Juries from almost every term of court.

This time the 16 jurors labeled the lock-up "totally inadequate, unsanitary, too confining." The list of evils to be found in the jail included the following:

"Kitchen facilities obsolete, need additional ventilation, requires a larger refrigerator with ample freezer compartment. Jail facilities are inadequate, unsanitary toilet facilities, improper lighting."

"Additional space is required for females and juveniles," the report continued. It said eating space was cramped, floors were wet, and plaster on the walls was bad. The jury said the exercise yard was not escape proof also.

The Grand Jury recommended the construction of a new jail at the site of the present jail and assessor's Office.

The Assessor's Office and the Planning Commission Office across Monroe Street should be incorporated in an expanded Courthouse complex the jury recommended.

"We recommend that the present Courthouse Building be added to from Monroe Street and Sarah Street, going east to include the present Shafer Building site ...," the report stated.

The condition of the county jail has been before the Monroe County Commissioners for decades.

A Grand Jury in 1944 recommended the jail be re-built as soon as the war was over and the shortage of lumber was alleviated.

More recently, Monroe County Sheriff Forrest B. Sebring began a campaign to have the conditions at the jail improved when he took office in 1968.

At the outset of his second term of office last January, Sebring said he would push for better conditions at the jail. He said one means of attacking the problem would be the creation of a prison board to oversee the operation of the jail.

Sebring proposed the idea of a prison board to the commissioners in April. He was told at the time the commissioners would study the matter.

Sebring will probably again approach the commissioners for a prison board in the near future. The sheriff believes the involvement of more officials in the problems of the jail will help solve some of its problems.

FOUR

Two top U.S. golf hopes gain British victories

SANDWICH, England (UPI) — Dick Siderowf and Ed Tutwiler, the two top U.S. hopes, cruised easily into the third round of the British Amateur golf championship Tuesday at wind-swept Royal St. George's golf course.

The two former Walker Cup men lodged convincing victories on a day when fierce winds, blowing in gusts, again made the 6,633-yard, par-70 seaside link a formidable challenge.

Siderowf, a 34-year-old from Westport, Conn., making his first trip to Britain, clobbered David Farrer of Kenya, 7 and 6. A one-under score for the holes played underlined the belief that Siderowf carries the main American challenge.

Tutwiler, 52, from Indianapolis, Ind., had no trouble disposing of Britain's Peter Holt, 5 and 4, but admitted "he was good to me and I had to scramble a lot."

Otherwise, it wasn't a happy day for the U.S. contingent. Only three of the 13 who played it through to join the 10 successful Americans on Monday and the five who advanced by forfeits.

One of the American losers was 21-year-old Peter Van Igen of Locust Valley, N.Y., and it's a loss he'll be talking about for a long time to come. Van Igen fell victim to 14-year-old golfing sensation Davey Robertson, Scotland's schoolboy champion who made a mockery of the poor conditions.

The 53 youngster, who eats one and a half pounds of beefsteak a day to maintain his 176-pound strength, won the match, 7 and 5, as he shot four birdies and an eagle three, winding up four under for the holes played.

"It was a pleasure to watch him play and no disgrace to lose," Van Igen said when it was over. "He would have beaten anyone today."

Robertson is believed by championship committee Chairman Charles Lawrie to be the youngest player ever to appear in this tournament.

British Walker cup skipper Mike Bonallack, a 37-year-old local hero seeking his sixth title, had to come back from the very brink of defeat to reach the third round.

Bonallack was three down after eight holes and still trailed by that margin with five to play. He finally squeezed through to a one-hole victory with a par four at the 18th, when his little known opponent, Simon Brewin, a 30-year-old captain in the parachute regiment, topped his second shot.

Siderowf made a sensational start by winning the first six holes. He birdied the first with a 10-foot putt and the third with an eight-footer, and even took the fourth despite a bogey five.

The players halved the long seventh and Siderowf's first loss was at the eighth, where he three-putted. A 10-foot birdie putt at the 11th and a par at the 12th ended the one-sided match.

"I played very well and have no complaints about my game at all," Siderowf said. "But, hell, that's sure some wind." Tutwiler said he had "good chipping" to thank for his victory margin.

"I didn't really play that well and I guess I was a couple over par," he said.

"Tut" did well to win the first hole after driving into a trap and also took the fourth, sixth, seventh and eighth with par figures to go five up at the turn. He three-putted the 10th but recovered at the 11th and a half at the 14th sewed it up.

Three areas in New York escape off-track bet hold

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Only the city of Schenectady and the counties of Orange and Nassau will be permitted to start off-track betting operations in the next 10 months.

Governor Rockefeller Tuesday signed legislation imposing a one-year moratorium, beginning last April, on new off-track operations, exempting those three areas. At the same time, Rockefeller vetoed a companion bill that would have exempted Western New York and Suffolk County from the ban.

Orange and Nassau counties and Schenectady were exempted in the original moratorium bill because they already had applications on file with the off-track pari-mutuel betting commission. The commission, however, must approve those applications before the gambling can start.

Western New York and Suffolk County were considering filing applications this summer, and had asked to be exempted from the ban.

Rockefeller said he vetoed the second bill because it violated the concept of his moratorium.

"I will shortly appoint a special task force," he said, "to study the impact of off-track betting on the state, local and track revenues and to explore various approaches to off-track betting which would avoid the disadvantages inherent in a proliferation of incompatible, competing systems and protect public revenues."

"Consideration of further off-track betting plans should await the results of that study and the expiration of the moratorium at the end of the current fiscal year," he said.

The bill also provides a number of "sweeteners" to increase the share of OTB receipts going to tracks and race owners. Both have claimed the New York City OTB has cut into their attendance and revenues.

The measures would: — Put the industry's share of OTB betting on a sliding scale, from four per cent of polls under $25 million down to one per cent of polls over $100 million a year. The money would also be split 50-50 between tracks and increased purses for owners. Currently, tracks get one per cent of bets and owners get 1-2 per cent.

The trial scale would last from July, 1972 to July 1973.

— Lower the minimum age for betting, both on and off track, from 21 to 18.

League to meet

EAST STROUDSBURG — Officials of the Monroe County Teeners League are to meet at 8:30 p.m. today at East Stroudsburg High School.

ERNEST TURTZO, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest A. Turtzo, Wind Gap, received the Brooks prize for varsity football at Blair Academy, Blairstown. He was a starting guard.

Pa. 500 entries in mail

MOUNT POCONO — Dr. Joseph R. Mattioli, chairman of the board of Pocono International Raceway announced Tuesday that entry blanks for the second annual Pennsylvania "500" had been mailed.

In making the announcement Mattioli said, "July promises to be the most exciting month of the 1972 racing season for eastern racing fans. Today, over 400 entry blanks for the July 30, United States Auto Club sanctioned 500 mile late model stock car race were mailed to every USAC stock car owner and driver and to members of the National Association of Stock Car Auto Racing (NASCAR)."

"Although we are in the middle of preparation for our July 2 Schaefer 500 at Pocono, we are looking to July 30 with great anticipation.

"The 1971 running of the Pennsylvania 500 proved to be one of the season's most exciting races. Butch Hartman beat A. J. Foyt by a mere 1.6 seconds during the $85,000 event in which lead changed hands 19 times.

"Our anticipation is created by the fact that we have a full International FIA listing for the 1972 event which will allow the NASCAR drivers to meet the USAC contingent, the only such opportunity these two groups have to battle each other in the northeast United States."

Practice and qualifications for the Pennsylvania "500" will be held July 28 to July 29.

Smith advances in French tourney

PARIS (UPI) — Top American seed Stan Smith moved into the quarterfinals of the French Open tennis championships Tuesday by overpowering Franeksek Pala of Czechoslovakia, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3.

The rangy, third-seeded Smith from Sea Pines, S.C., combined a thundering serve with a display of effective court strokes to eliminate his 14th seeded opponent.

Meantime, Clark Graebner of New York had trouble with his serve and was eliminated from the $100,000 clay court championships by Spain's Andres Gimeno, 3-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2, 6-1.

In women's play, Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., impressed spectators in the Roland Garros stadium center court by easily downing Britain's Virginia Wade, 6-1, 6-3, to claim a semifinal berth against Helga Masthoff of West Germany.

Smith's control of his strokes drove Pala at one point to throw his arms in the air in despair after the current U.S. Open champion drove a passing shot by him.

In the last set, after breaking Pala's serve in the fourth and sixth games, Smith got to match point on a service ace and then sent a blazing backhand shot by the helpless Czech for the victory.

"This is the first time I've served so well since two months ago when I hurt my arm," Smith said after the victory. "I feel I'm playing well now."

In a three-hour contest, Graebner managed to hold his service only once in the last two sets as Gimeno, feeling comfortable on the red clay courts, gained momentum.

The Spaniard, a former World Championship Tennis (WCT) tour professional, stayed in the backcourt until the last three games, relying on his ground strokes to counter Graebner's erratic play.

The 28-year-old Graebner, seeded 11th, had advanced two rounds without losing a set.

Mrs. King established herself as a strong contender for the ladies crown, the only major title she has failed to win, by making short work of Miss Wade.

The 28-year-old Californian took "charge from the start, pleasing an admiring gallery with brilliant lobs, smashes and drop shots.

Miss Wade appeared to rally somewhat at the start of the second set when she took advantage of her opponent's mistakes to string together eight straight points to go ahead 2-0. But Mrs. King extinguished the brief flame by powering back to 2-2 on her way to the 6-3 final set.

"We play more on clay at home now, so it's better," Mrs. King said in explaining her ease on the French clay courts. The three-time Wimbledon champion has lost only 11 games so far in advancing through three rounds.

Mrs. King next will be pitted against Helga Masthoff of West Germany, who qualified earlier in the day for the semifinals by outlasting compatriot Katja Ebblinghaus, 6-3, 8-6.

Miss Masthoff was the losing finalist here two years ago.

Joining Smith and Gimeno in the men's singles quarterfinals were Adriano Panatta of Italy and Alexander Metreveli of the Soviet Union.

Panatta beat Ray Moore of South Africa, 6-0, 7-9, 6-3, 6-2, in a duel from the baseline. The 21-year-old Italian, who upset high-seeded Romanian Ilie Nastase in an earlier round, held off Moore's charges to the net with his good retrieving ability and passing shots.

Metreveli defeated Frenchman Pierre Barthes, 8-6, 6-2, 10-12, 6-3, at twilight in the center court. The Soviet was unable to cash in on two match-points in the third set.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Geraldine Chaplin and her Spanish guy, Carlos Saura, have been living openly together in Spain for four years and are planning a picture that may get them in trouble. "too far" plot's an anti-Fascist anti-Franco tale, and anyway, all Carlos' flicks have been banned there for portended slants. Tina Sinatra's heading for Europe to forget her Bob Wagner romance. Pop may swing along part of the way. Ross Hunter flung a party for Peter Finch who digs old movie queens and no cracks: invited were Loretta Young, B. Stanwyck, Irene Dunne, Janet Gaynor, Norma Shearer and, of course, Ross. Cary Grant's mother told him she'd be happy if he dyed his white hair. Not to make Cary younger but, "Because your hair makes me look so old." Mom's 94.

Brigitte Bardot at 37 feels so antique, she's preparing her funeral. She told an intimate, "Before I'm buried, someone stick a needle through my heart to make sure."

Doug McClelland's finished a book about Susan Hayward's career. He just saw a private screening of Susan's "The Revengers" film (her first in five years) which lured her out of Fla. retirement. Doug's comments: "Susan has about 15 minutes in the film. She was atrociously lighted and lacked the makeup of even a respectable corpse. It's the low point in her career and also that of William Holden and Ernest Borgnine. Fortunately for Susan, the film probably will come and go quickly." Doug's book, "The Unkindest Cuts," about scenes landing on the cutting room floor, is due next month from Barnes publishing.

Phil D'Antoni, whose "The French Connection" cleaned up the Oscars, next will co-sponsor "Cruising" (an ugly homo-tale), due to film next month in Central Park. The leading role's a lad masquerading as a decoy homosexual. Beau Bridges wants it. Wonder why.

Success story: Ed Loeb started at Cue Mag in '37 as a $65 a month office boy. Now he's publisher, vice-president, treasurer and a director. Zat all? All boys together; Rudy Nureyev of the Entrecatch Set and Van Cliburn of the tinkle group are nightly Russian Tea Room buddies.

Gov. Rockefeller's target in the N.Y. City highways dept' probe will be Lindsay pal Constantine Sidamon-Eristoff. The "Slaughter" flick management figured it won't do marvelously below the Mason-Dixon line anyway, so it will brazen out its in-the-sack stills of Stella Stevens and Jim Brown. Playboy grabbed what it could. When Comm. Murphy and Deputy Comm. Bob Daley disagreed and split, one of the few whiffs of fresh air disappeared from the police dept'. Again, it's them against us.

Paul Newman's solution to getting his pictures published: simply makes an obscene manual gesture as he did the other night at the ballet. Elliott Gould took a feeble swat at Henry Fonda, Glenn Ford and a few film oldtimers in Playboy. They're desperately cashing in on their old reputations simply because they can't get films to do. TV isn't ready for Gould's lack of old reputation yet. The Ali-Frazier theater-TV tickets may bring $25.

Carl Reiner's "All in the Family" real-life son, Rob, like his dad worries about balding. The N.Y. legislature's adjournment-delay wasn't because of the abortion and no-fault insurance votes: it was caused by who's to succeed Senate majority leader Earl Brydges. Warren Anderson of Binghamton and Rochester's Tom Laverne are battling it out. Long Island Senators control the balance of power. Bet on Laverne.

Assemblyman Milton Jonas is a lawyer — just given an honorary Dr. of Podiatry degree by the N.Y. College of Podiatric Medicine. Albany solons already are needing him with all the foot-in-mouth jokes. One of the great ladies of the world died this week, Fannie Rosmarin, wife of Charles Rosmarin, former European head of RKO Pictures, most recently of MGM. Marvelous, thoughtful, lovely, a dear and treasured friend beloved by everyone.

Some 75 wives of touring French business executives decended on Ohrbach's, enlightening insight on French women's tastes: they bought seads of long cotton peasant dresses, sheer nylon dress-length nighties — and boys' nylon baseball jackets with patches of all the big league teams. Ohrbach's is the store that does the biggest U.S. trade in copied-French couture originals.

Harold Minsky brings his burlesque "Follies" to the West Paterson (N.J.) spot, "The Scotsman," June 1. The announcement proves everything is reversed today in showbiz: "Jack — this is a clean show, the oldtime burlesque — more fully clothed, and comics that are sensational," P.A. confided. It's straight from Las Vegas, but the cast contains lots of local leering: Linda Stuart of Hackensack, N.J., Nancy Friedman "who has relatives in Paterson."

Ann Landers

Cradle-robber!

Dear Ann Landers: This is for the 38-year-old mother who confessed that she felt a slight tug of attraction for her daughter's 18-year-old boyfriend: No, you're not nuts, honey. Furthermore, I'll be millions of women who read that column identified with you — but they wouldn't dare admit it, not even to themselves.

Our four daughters were teen-agers at the same time. I had small crushes on several of the boys who came to the house and it was harmless fun. Let's face it, a woman's romantic fantasies are stronger than a man's — and they last longer. By the time a husband approaches his late 30's, the fire has died down and married sex is pretty routine. What could be more natural than a mother reliving the excitement of young love through her daughter?

I say enjoy your secret thoughts and have a good laugh at yourself. Of course it's ridiculous, but there is no harm so long as you are the only one who is laughing.

Me, Too, In Anchorage

Dear Ann: The trick is to know it's ridiculous and to keep it funny. This is not so easy to do if the young boys sense you find them attractive, Mrs. Robinson. The real danger lies in the possibility that a perceptive daughter might get the idea you are competing with her. A well-balanced, middle-aged woman should be involved in living her own life. There is something quite sad about a mother who is reduced to seeking vicarious thrills by fantasizing about her daughter's boyfriends.

Dear Ann Landers: My husband and I have been arguing and we need an outside point of view. Please help.

George won a sales contest and the prize is a five-day trip to Bermuda. Neither of us has ever been there and we are awfully excited about it.

Our daughters 15 and 12, are mature and responsible. We've never had any trouble with them. When we hear about the problems our friends are having with their teen-agers we consider ourselves lucky. The girls insist it would be perfectly O.K. to leave them alone in the house. I'm uneasy about doing it even though I'm sure they can be trusted. We live on a safe street in a good neighborhood.

The older girl has been a sitter for two years and she says it would make no sense for us to hire someone to sit with her. My husband's answer: "No dice." What do you say?

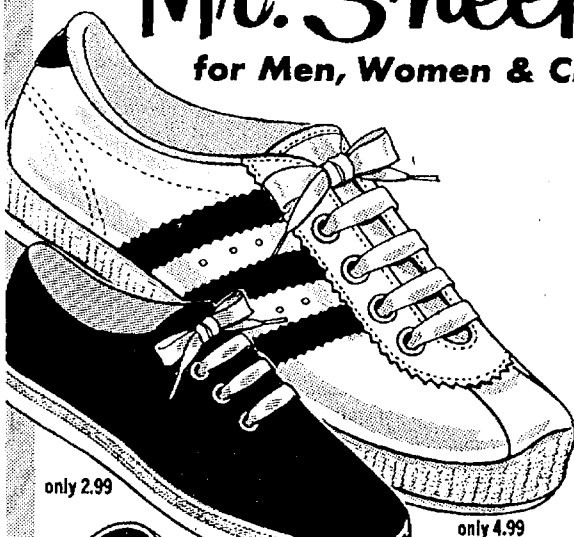

In The Middle

Dear In: I say no dice, also. This in no way suggests the girls can't be trusted, but there are darned few places like Mechanic Falls, Maine, Lady. Hire an older woman to come in and stay with your daughters. Or perhaps a relative can help out.

P. S. When you're in Bermuda, look for me in the Mid-Ocean News in Hamilton. It's a nifty paper.

Sneak previews get 'em talking

By STEPHEN GROVER
Dow Jones — Ottaway News
NEW YORK — "The boy from 'Love Story' meets the girl from 'Funny Girl' in a G-rated screwball comedy from the director of 'The Last Picture Show'."

So ran the teaser ads in local newspapers here one day last March. Readers, lest anyone be confused, were being invited to attend a "sneak preview" of a new Warner Bros. film that evening.

And it seems safe to say that few film fans failed to realize they were being enticed to spend an evening watching Barbra "Funny Girl" Streisand and Ryan "Love Story" O'Neal in the latest directorial effort of Peter Bogdanovich.

Such enticements were sufficient to lure a line of 1,000 fans, each clutching $3 for admission, to the Loews State-11 Theater on Broadway to see "What's Up, Doc?" But if most of the movie buffs were au courant about Loew's fare that evening, they were nevertheless in for another kind of surprise.

For once they had paid their money and entered the theater, they found that all the best seats had already been occupied by a non-paying audience of critics, movie company executives, newspapermen, disc jockeys, secretaries, educators, security analysts, religious leaders, representatives of both the underground and college press and scores of others known in the trade as "opinion makers."

It's all another strange facet of life in those American outposts of New York and Hollywood. Anybody who's anybody, or anybody who even thinks he's anybody, or anybody who has a brother-in-law or a second cousin, once removed, who's anybody, gets to go to the movies free. And he gets to go generally before the movie is introduced to the public.

What's more, the screening for "What's Up, Doc?" was an exception — usually the "opinion maker" doesn't have to put up with the bores who pay; usually the screenings are in private and cozy little theaters seating from 17 to 250 people. There is a hard core of 4,000 or so "opinion makers" here in New York, and they all have, but one thing in common — they talk a lot, a whole lot, and to a lot of people.

They are not necessarily smart, or beautiful, or rich or witty. They just have big mouths and big audiences, generally captive ones. The movie companies figure that as long as these people are going to talk, they might as well talk about movies.

So the companies invite them to see the movies free — figuring that, among other things, anyone who sees a movie free will tend to like it and praise it because (1) he didn't have to shell out any money to see it, and (2) he will feel so important and grateful for being asked that he will feel almost "duty-bound" to find something nice to say about the film.

And if a person is talking favorably about a film, the reasoning goes, all his friends will want to rush out to see it either because they want to or simply so they can prove they are just as up-to-date as he is. The friends will plunk down $3 each to see the flick, and the movie companies will get rich.

That's the marketing theory, and it works. "People don't go to movies on the basis of reviews, as they would to the (legitimate) theaters," says Robert S. Ferguson, Columbia Pictures' vice president in charge of world-wide advertising publicity and exploitation.

Nothing nutty about Owens off the tube

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Gary Owens and Ruth Buzzi, along with the two comedians, are the sole remaining members of the original "Rowan and Martin Laugh-In."

Owens is the nutty announcer who cups his hand to his ear and appears, to be totally unaware that a television show is in progress.

Beneath the flaky caricature of a 1930s radio announcer lies a very un-nutty fellow indeed. Also a very rich one. Aside from the weekly comedy hour, Gary holds down five other jobs.

He appears six days a week on Los Angeles radio station KMPC as a disc jockey where his bon mots are better than any of the music he plays. His ratings are tops. Additionally, he does 400 voice-over commercials a year, provides the voices for animated cartoons and has written two screenplays.

Owens has the distinction of having studied under presidential candidate Sen George S. McGovern when the latter was a history professor at Dakota Wesleyan University where Gary met his bride, Arleta Markell.

Both the Owensens are natives of S. Dakota. Gary is from the metropolis of Plankinton (population 600). Arleta is from the somewhat smaller city of Seneca (pop. 200).

Because his schedule is so frantic, Owens has little time to spend in his California modern home in the San Fernando valley where his sons, Scott 12, and Chris 8, are in the swimming pool almost every day.

The boys have four dogs and an enormous yard in which to play.

"They go after they hear people talking about a particular picture. And the best way to get a picture talked about is to screen it."

Free screenings probably date back to "The Great Train Robbery." But Jonas Rosenfield Jr., Twentieth Century-Fox film's counterpart to Ferguson, says it was the late Joseph Burstyn who refined the art of screening for commercial benefits.

former college basketball players — as was Gary.

Owen also takes karate lessons, not so much for self-protection but to keep in good physical condition.

"That's the way I relax," he says. "It eases the burden of working."

Gary and Arleta have been married 14 years and have resided in southern California since 1962.

Headaches from hot dogs?

By ELMONT WAITE
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. — A new ailment has been added to the list of dietary discomforts by a University of California medical-research team here: The hot-dog headache.

The researchers, Dr. Neil H. Raskin, assistant professor in the Department of Neurology, and William R. Henderson, a third-year medical student, began their study of the medical oddity seven months ago with a single patient, and since then, "we have found literally dozens of cases," Raskin says.

"We suspect that in the past, people were afraid they would be called nuts if they said they got headaches from eating hot dogs," he explains. "But when reports of our findings began to get around, numerous people began coming in to tell us about it."

They are people who are more sensitive than most to sodium nitrite, a chemical added in the curing process to produce a uniformly red color in such meats as frankfurters, bacon, ham, or salami.

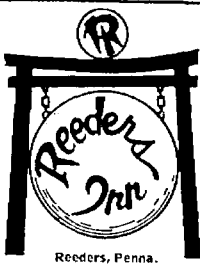

The first patient Raskin and Henderson examined was a 58-year-old man who develops headaches after eating as little as one ounce of hot-dog or other cured meat.

The "moderately severe" headaches, a dull, nonthrobbing pain, occur in both temples within 30 minutes after the cured meat is eaten, may last as long as several hours, and sometimes are accompanied by facial flushing. "It has been recognized for some time that numerous foods are capable of inducing vascular headaches in certain patients," they reported. "Chocolate, cheese, citrus fruits, and alcohol are the most common offenders. Food-induced headache, or 'dietary migraine,' has been ascribed to an allergy to the food in the past."

Another food factor, monosodium L-glutamate, used to accentuate flavor, has been shown to cause what is known as the Chinese-restaurant syndrome — a set of symptoms including burning sensations in the fingertips, abdominal pains, and headaches, the researchers said.

Code for parents

As the end of another school year approaches, it will be necessary for some parents to appear on the school grounds for graduation ceremonies.

If this is your first graduation (whether 8th grade, high school, or college), you want it to be a memorable one. As a parent, there is a code to be adhered to.

First, when arriving with your son or daughter do not park in a prominent place lest you give the impression you and the graduate are traveling together. Select an obscure spot behind the power plant, sit rigid for five minutes with eyes straight ahead to give your son or daughter time in which to exit hastily and arrive at the auditorium alone.

Second, adhere to the modest dress code. No long hair, bright colors, hats, white socks, or "I Am An American" button.

When the graduation line is snaking down the aisle past your seat, do not, repeat, do not smile at your child. This is humiliating to a graduate to be recognized by a parent. You are to stare straight ahead in a casual way like you are waiting for a physical.

Occasionally, you will see a brave parent who defies the wrath of his children by daring to bring cameras to the graduation. This takes real guts. I have seen graduates self-destruct before their parents' eyes, run off the stage to join a religious order, or become quite hysterical and shout, "What can you expect from a nut who named me Clarice Spiro Veronica?" (Who until that moment was known throughout the school as Big Mike.)

The same goes with applause at the moment they receive their diploma. To initiate any kind of pride in your child at graduation is second in sin only to stealing and coveting your neighbor's wife.

At the end of the ceremonies, it is bug-off time for parents. In 55 short minutes, your son or daughter has inherited the earth and all its problems. He or she has been told they are ready to change the world, meet the challenges, make the peace and restore order. They are educated, independent, committed to the tasks that lie ahead. They must take their place as leaders in this society and make the difference between success and ultimate failure.

Oh, and don't be surprised if your graduate whispers out of the bushes, "Hey, Pop, can you take my cap and gown home? I couldn't find the car."

Tried too hard

By Jean Adams

PURSUIT: (Q.) When I met this boy at Christmas I liked him. I wanted to go with him but he didn't ask me for a date or anything. So I called him up several times and did everything but invite him to ask me to go out with him.

But he didn't. He got less and less friendly every time I called, so I quit.

Now I just say "Hi" when I see him. He doesn't even answer me back. I still like him and still want to go with him. Is there ANYTHING I can do to make him change his mind about me?

No Luck in New York State

(A.) A girl can't just make a boy like her. When she tries too hard to encourage him to like her she is likely to get the opposite result.

You tried too hard. And you took one of the surest roads to make this boy DISLIKE you. Boys simply do not like to be chased as obviously as you chased him.

It is time for you to look around for another boy to be friendly with.

Sorry. And next time take it easier.

BRA TIME: (Q.) I am about 32 in the bust, but I do not wear a bra — I wear an undershirt. I feel so weird. All my friends wear bras and some of them are just plain flat-chested, which I'm not. I would feel dumb asking my mother for a bra. What should I say?

Nearly 12 in New Mexico.

(A.) Just say, "Mother, I've outgrown this undershirt. I think it is time for us to go shopping and get me a bra."

SAD SITTER: (Q.) When I baby-sit the children take advantage of me. They do things I'm sure their parents wouldn't let them do. But when I yell at them to stop they tell their parents I'm a terrible baby sitter and I don't get called back. Can you help me?

No Job in Massachusetts

(A.) Yelling at children is not the way to make them behave. It is also not the way to make them like you. They will like you more if you make the time you spend with them interesting.

Try playing games with them, reading to them, getting them to sing songs, and other diversions to keep them entertained and in reasonably good order.

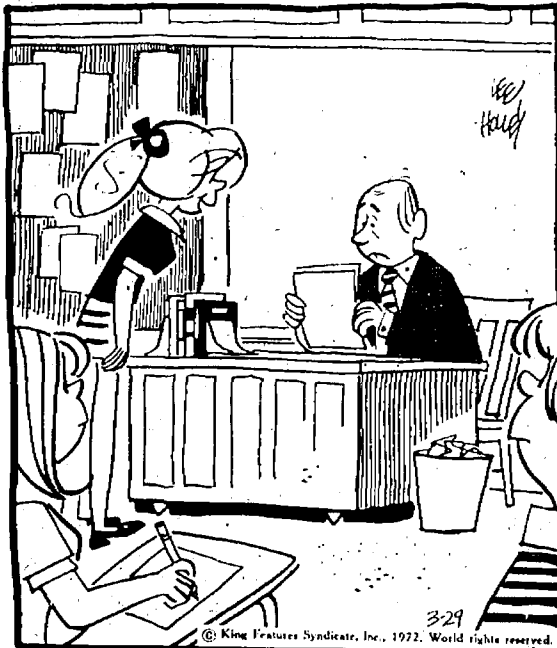

"I HATE IT!": (Q.) My mother is making me a dress. I hate it. I don't want to wear it in public. She would be mad if I told her. What should I do?

Dreading It in Indiana

(A.) Why did you let your mother get so far down the line on a dress you know you don't want? You should have told her how you felt in the beginning so her time would not have been wasted.

If you told her and she still went ahead with the dress, then she is as much at fault as you.

Questions about utilities have PUC in uproar

By JANE SHOEMAKER

HARRISBURG (UPI)—Utility rates. Few people think about them other than to sign the checks each month and tell the children once in a while to stop leaving lights on.

The Pennsylvania homeowner pays $50 to 70 a month for electricity, water, gas, and his telephone. Unless his salary is more than $25,000, he pays more for utilities than for the income tax.

And although he demands to know where and how his tax dollar is being spent, he never expects the same accountability for his utility dollar.

Should the state step in and make the consumer's argument for him? Should the individual rate payer have a say in what he is charged for electricity or water? What size profit is "reasonable" for a utility to earn?

These questions have the Public Utility Commission, the regulatory agency for 5,600 different companies, in an uproar.

Until this year, the five-man commission acted as a team. If there was any disagreement about a rate decision, it always was kept private.

Utilities requested increases, hearings were conducted, and decisions were announced. It was always that simple.

Two things happened which upset the traditional pattern. First, Gov. Milton J. Shapp appointed Louis Carter, a Democrat, to the all-Republican commission and instructed him to examine each rate request with an eye toward consumers.

Utilities began issuing dissenting opinions. Unlike previous commissioners, he insisted that his dissents be made public.

Second, Shapp appointed a new chief counsel for the commission and gave him similar instructions. Philip Kalodner joined the PUC and immediately took the side of the consumer in some key rate cases.

Both Carter and Kalodner said the commission was too utility oriented. They said their actions were not the best way of representing the consumer, but it was better than nothing.

Commission Chairman George I. Bloom has successfully fought attempts by the pair to change the PUC's style.

He says the commission always looks out for consumer interests in its normal course of duties. Commonwealth Court has supported his argument that Kalodner has no right to take sides in a rate case unless he is instructed to do so by the commissioners.

Bloom staunchly defends the PUC's past record of decisions as "fair and reasonable." The other three commissioners have backed him up.

It is obvious that the governor's first plan of action has failed. If Shapp tells Bloom the commission is too utility-oriented, Bloom can counter by saying Shapp is forcing it too far the other way and discriminating against the utilities.

But there is an alternative which can satisfy controversy — establishment of a new office of Citizen's Advocate.

Shapp proposed the new office months ago and a bill is in the legislature, but so far no action has been taken on it.

The Citizen's Advocate would be appointed by the governor to represent the interests of the public before "any executive, legislative or judicial body, office commission or agency of the commonwealth."

In other words, he would work for no one except the consumer.

Brazil seeks jail reforms

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI)—A report by special investigators of inhuman treatment of Brazilian convicts has caused President Emilio Garrastazu Medici to seek prison reforms that would bring all jails under federal control.

The report, written by Ministry of Justice agents who toured jails in every state, said investigators found chained prisoners, violence, perversion and filth.

It will serve as a guide for legislation ordered by Medici to modernize the prison system and create a federal inspector general's office to oversee control of the nation's jails, now under state and municipal authority.

The report said many institutions were "virtual schools for the perfection of criminals."

In Guanabara state, where Rio de Janeiro is located, the investigators found men jammed like cattle in small cells.

"The prisoners are not allowed out of the cells, not even to eat," the report said. "The climate is tense and there is no rehabilitation or work for the inmates."

In another jail the investigators found crammed, roofless cells with no protection against the elements.

"Total promiscuity is noted among the inmates. Insane prisoners, homosexuals and minors are all mixed together."

In northernmost Roraima on the Guyana border they found two 12-year-old girls working as prostitutes in a jail.

Harris Survey report

McGovern grabs tight lead

By LOUIS HARRIS

In a nationwide test in early May between Democratic Presidential possibilities, including Sen. Edward Kennedy, Senator George McGovern forged into a narrow one-point lead as the first choice of Democrats and Independents. The South Dakota Senator has moved up dramatically on the heels of his strong showing in several spring primaries.

Over the past months, the Harris Survey has asked this question of national cross sections of likely voters, the last time on May 9 and 10, among 1,123 Democrats and Independents: "Which one of the people on this list would be your first choice for the Democratic Presidential nomination this year? (Hand Respondent List)"

TOP DEMOCRATIC CHOICE (Among Democrats and Independents)
	May Per cent	April Per cent	March Per cent	February Per cent
McGovern	21	8	6	5
Humphrey	20	17	18	15
Kennedy	20	17	15	12
Wallace	19	17	12	12
Muskie	6	15	20	24
/Jackson	3	4	5	6
McCarthy	3	3	3	4
Chisholm	2	3	3	5
None	3	6	8	9
Not sure	3	10	10	8

McGovern's nationwide rise between early April and mid-May was spectacular. But Humphrey, Kennedy, and Wallace also picked up ground since February. (The survey was taken just before the May 15 attempt on Gov. Wallace's life.) The big loser, of course, was Sen. Edmund Muskie of Maine, the early first-runner who faltered and then dropped out of campaigning in the primaries after Pennsylvania.

When Sen. Edward Kennedy's supporters were asked who their second choice would be, the chief beneficiary, taking 41 per cent of his vote, was Sen. Humphrey. A smaller 22 per cent of the Kennedy vote went to Sen. McGovern, suggesting the potential importance of a Kennedy endorsement in the future. Here is how the Democratic line-up looks with Kennedy's vote distributed among his supporters' second-choice preferences:

DEMOCRATIC CHOICE WITH KENNEDY OUT

	May Per cent	April Per cent	March Per cent	February Per cent
McGovern	21	8	6	5
Humphrey	20	17	18	15
Kennedy	20	17	15	12
Wallace	19	17	12	12
Muskie	6	15	20	24
/Jackson	3	4	5	6
McCarthy	3	3	3	4
Chisholm	2	3	3	5
None	3	6	8	9
Not sure	3	10	10	8

	May Per cent	April Per cent	March Per cent	February Per cent
Humphrey	28	28	22	17
McGovern	26	10	7	6
Wallace	21	18	14	13
Muskie	7	18	23	28
McCarthy	4	4	3	5
Jackson	3	5	6	6
Chisholm	3	4	4	6
None	3	5	8	11
Not sure	3	8	13	8

With Kennedy out, Humphrey assumed a two-point lead over McGovern. However, the Minnesota Senator's total of 28 per cent has not grown in the past month, while the preference for both Sen. McGovern and Gov. George Wallace was still rising.

These results reveal a great deal about the top three leaders in Democratic delegates.

— Senator Humphrey's strength is heavily rooted among blacks, the less well educated, enrolled Democrats and male voters. But he does have significant backing in all four regions of the country.

— Senator McGovern leads in every region outside the South, but runs a poor third below the Mason-Dixon line. He easily wins the under-30 vote, the college-educated, and independents, while he edges out Humphrey among whites and women voters. In light of the attention being paid to blue collar voters, it is significant that McGovern is not far behind Wallace among high-school graduates, who constitute a substantial portion of the so-called "protest" vote this year.

— Gov. Wallace sweeps the South, but before the shooting was clearly in third place in the rest of the country. His strength is greatest among older voters, the least well educated, whites, and men. Wallace and Humphrey appear to draw their support from the same pattern, except that Wallace has no appeal among blacks. The tug-of-war is Wallace's appeal to the most alienated portion of voters who would normally be at home with Sen. Humphrey.

Thus, the uncertainty of Gov. Wallace's role in the 1972 Presidential race has repercussions on the candidacies of both Sen. Humphrey and Sen. McGovern. As the Harris Survey will report Thursday, Humphrey is more the beneficiary than McGovern among voters whose first choice has been Wallace.

The new Toyota Carina*1972

It won't cramp you or your pocketbook.

Maybe you believe the Toyota Carina 2-Door Sedan is simply a good looking, but mild mannered, family car. Maybe you're wrong. Because the Carina comes with a four-on-the-floor all synchromesh transmission and a 4-cylinder, 96.9 cubic-inch displacement engine that delivers 88 h.p. at 6,000 R.P.M. When it's time to stop, Carina does the job with power-assisted front disc and rear drum brakes. Many people will be surprised to learn that an economy car like Carina is such a good performer. But, in a way, it's not such a surprise. After all, it's a Toyota.

OUR LONG-WEARING VOLVOS COME IN ELEVEN MACHINE-WASHABLE, FADE-RESISTANT COLORS.

All our Volvos wear six coats. Which is why a Volvo of any color is ideally suited to take a lot of wash and wear.

The three enamel color coats are applied wet-on-wet-on-wet. Then the body is baked in an oven. The result is a thick, hard finish that protects against corrosion and resists the bleaching effects of the summer sun.

(In Sweden, where the summer sun can shine 24 hours a day, Volvo is the #1 best seller both new and used.)

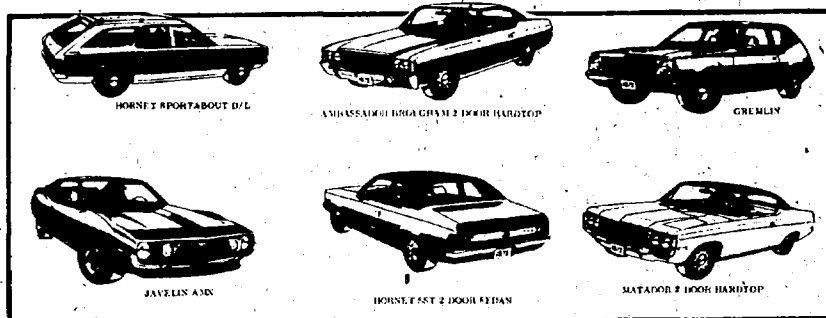

So in considering performance, look past m.p.h. to the finish. And see us for a colorfast Volvo.

Bremer's travels traced

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal agents are piecing together the criss-cross journeyings of Arthur H. Bremer that placed him in the vicinity of President Nixon and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey in the weeks prior to the shooting of Gov. George C. Wallace.

Bremer, charged with the May 15 assassination attempt on Wallace, has been traced to Ottawa, Canada, during Nixon's state visit there April 13-15. Evidence has come to light showing him in four states — Wisconsin, Michigan, New York and Maryland — with several witnesses identifying him as present at a Humphrey rally.

From the time Bremer vanished from a bus boy job at the Milwaukee Athletic Club, investigators have traced him as follows:

April 3 — At a Humphrey campaign rally at Capital Plaza shopping center in Milwaukee the day before the Wisconsin primary. A fellow worker at the athletic club claimed to have spoken to him at the rally. A Humphrey campaign worker also has identified Bremer as at the affair.

April 4 — A man turned up at Wallace headquarters in Milwaukee and has been identified as Bremer by the candidate's campaign aides.

April 5 or 6 — Employees at the auto ferry service between Milwaukee and Michigan reported Bremer turned up at the Milwaukee ticket office.

April 7 and 8 — Bremer was registered at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York City. Humphrey was scheduled to spend the night of April 7 at the hotel but cancelled his appearance in New York at the last minute.

April 13 and 14 — In Ottawa where his name appeared on the register of the Lord Elgin Hotel, three blocks from Parliament Hill where Nixon visited.

'Oh, my aching back!' unfunny, persistent illness

By FREDERICK C. KLEIN
Dow Jones — Ottaway News

You are opening a window or tying your shoe or going into your backswing on the 4th tee when — sproing! — it hits: a sharp, intense pain in the small of your back. It hurts every time you move that day and the next.

You consult a doctor, and he prescribes rest, heat treatments, and aspirin. The pain goes away, but a few weeks or months later you are reaching for your razor and it hits again.

You have become an official "bad back" sufferer.

That chain of events, or one pretty much like it, is getting to be increasingly common these days. Surveys by the National Center for Health Statistics indicate that more than seven million Americans currently are being treated for chronic back pain and that new cases are being added at a rate of 1.5 million to two million a year.

Although historical comparisons are lacking, most physicians believe that the pain in the back is a bigger health problem than it used to be; many rank it as the second most frequent reason adults see a doctor, right behind respiratory ills.

They also say that the condition, once considered mainly an affliction of manual laborers, has firmly invaded the middle class. Indeed, the orthopedists to whom most backache victims eventually turn regard these early spring weeks as bad-back season.

"I can depend on a full waiting room of middle-aged executives-turned-athletes every Monday after the first few nice weekends," says Dr. Robert Addison, a Chicago orthopedic surgeon and author on back care.

Bad backs have been around for a very long time, of course, but cures for the ailments that fall under that heading remain elusive. That's partly because diagnosis is difficult.

The lower spinal region is the site of many organs whose malfunction can manifest itself in back pain. These include the kidneys, bladder, prostate, and even the stomach.

In addition, the back itself is a complex mechanism subject to numerous problems. Back pain can emanate from a damaged vertebra or joint, from the cushion-like discs that separate the 24 detached vertebrae in the spine (the nine vertebrae of sacrum and coccyx are naturally fused), from ligaments that bind the spinal column or from the muscles that support it.

Finally, "objective" evidence of back trouble doesn't necessarily mean there will be pain, and lack of it doesn't mean there won't be.

"Some people's backs look beautiful on the tests, but they hurt like hell. Others are walking around with gross deformities that don't seem to bother them a bit," says Dr. Addison. "There is a lot about back pain we don't know, to say the least."

Despite all this, though, medical scientists are learning more about treating some of the back trouble.

One treatment under study would substitute enzyme injections for surgery to remove the material that escapes from herniated (or "slipped") discs, a frequent cause of disabling back pain. And improved techniques are emerging that promise to make back surgery simpler and safer.

"Your typical bad back victim today is an office worker in his late 30s or 40s," says Dr. D. Keith McElroy, a surgeon at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center in New York.

"He used to be an athlete, but he quit all that after college, except for some occasional show-boating. He's 20 or 30 pounds overweight, and he has a high-pressure job that bothers him. He isn't living right."
